

SANTANDER TRAVEL GRANTS FOR RESEARCH IN LATIN AMERICA ON BUSINESS AND ECONOMIC-RELATED THEMES

2012 AWARDS

This fund is able to grant awards of up to £2,000 to postgraduate researchers registered at the University of Bristol or academic staff, for travel to Latin America to research in the broad field of Latin American Studies across the arts, humanities and social sciences with relation to business and economic-related subjects. These could cover such topics as state economic or commercial policies, the logging industry, the adaptation of technological innovations by indigenous peoples, the economic expansion of multinational companies, the travel industry, the burgeoning NGO sector, or topics in the fields of economic and business history, for example.

Applicants should send a summary of their planned research (not more than one side of A4, as an email attachment) to matthew.brown@bris.ac.uk before 20 February 2012.

Applications should include the following information:

Name, department, stage of studies (i.e. MA, MSc, Year of PhD)
title of Project,
methodology, length of trip and proposed dates,
breakdown of expected expenses.

Awards will be announced by 20 March 2012.

The panel (Neil Bradshaw of RED, Matthew Brown of HiPLA) will award grants on the basis of the originality and strength of the proposals. The criteria are deliberately broad in order to encourage a range of applications from across the interdisciplinary field of Latin American Studies. Priority will be given to postgraduate researchers, though applications from academic staff may also be considered.
