Philosophy
Undergraduate study
Why study philosophy at Bristol?

Philosophy is not a subject with a body of truths or theories to be learnt but an activity in which you engage when trying to answer very general, abstract questions. Moral issues such as abortion and euthanasia prompt philosophical debate, as do theoretical discussions about the nature of time or consciousness. Philosophy begins with questions like these; they have a common feature.

Though other disciplines such as psychology, sociology and physics may provide relevant facts, they cannot provide the answers. Indeed, much of philosophy is concerned with basic, sometimes implicit assumptions made in these subjects. If these questions appeal and you find satisfaction in reasoned argument, you may want to study philosophy.

Bristol’s Department of Philosophy is very strong academically, with an established reputation for excellence in teaching and research. It is one of the largest philosophy departments in the UK and all our academics are active researchers. Areas of special strength include philosophy of mind and language, ethics, political philosophy, logic and philosophical logic, philosophy of mathematics and philosophy of science (especially biology and physics). The department is largely based within the ‘analytic’ tradition in philosophy, but some continental philosophy is taught (eg Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, Heidegger and Sartre).

Become an arts student at Bristol and you will be joining a diverse group of staff, students and subjects united by a fascination in exploring how humans express their experiences. From 2018 we are offering you even greater opportunities to explore subjects beyond your core studies and an average of ten or more contact hours per week. Through our innovative curriculum we ensure you develop the key skills and attributes employers seek while receiving a first-class education.
What will you study?

Our philosophy degree courses offer you both depth and breadth in three or four years of exciting and challenging study.

Our first-year units introduce you to philosophy and its methods. You will gain a basic knowledge of some fundamental problems of metaphysics, epistemology, ethics, and political philosophy, and a competence in both formal and informal logic. You can also choose from a range of optional units introducing you to some of the central texts in the history of philosophy, for example Aristotle’s Nicomachean Ethics or John Stuart Mill’s On Liberty.

In the second year you will take one mandatory unit giving you a solid grounding in some of the central issues of analytic philosophy, and you can choose from a wide range of optional units to broaden your knowledge. Current options include:
- Aesthetics
- Ethics
- Political Philosophy
- Metaphysics
- Epistemology
- Philosophy of Language
- Philosophy of the Natural and Social Sciences
- Philosophy of Religion
- Philosophy of Mind
- Schopenhauer and Nietzsche.

By the final year you will be in a position to specialise and undertake independent study. Final-year optional units are usually focused on the current research interests of staff. Recent units offered include:
- Kant’s Theoretical Philosophy
- Ethics and Literature
- Philosophy of Biology
- Probability and Rationality
- Philosophy of Physics
- Schopenhauer and Nietzsche
- Death, Dying and Disease
- Environmental Ethics
- Truth
- Global Justice
- Philosophy of Mathematics.

Teaching methods

Contact hours vary each academic year but your contact time with academics will mainly be during lectures, seminars, tutorials and problem classes. A certain amount of one-to-one teaching is delivered during essay feedback and extended essay supervision.

Assessment

Assessment is by a combination of examinations, coursework and final-year extended essays.

‘It took time for me to understand the value of studying something as abstract and non-specific as philosophy – eventually I realised that my degree had given me an open mind, the ability to think critically and rationally, and to understand and coherently explain complicated concepts. Bristol also has a reputation as a good university.’

Amy (BA Philosophy 2012)
Public Affairs Administrator, Stonewall

bristol.ac.uk/ug-study
The skills that arts students traditionally bring to the workplace are valued in every part of the employment market. Our students go on to succeed in careers as diverse as the subjects they study here – commerce, tech start-ups, law, accountancy, theatre, museums, publishing, the charity sector, journalism, politics, education and international relations, as well as sectors not immediately associated with arts disciplines, such as engineering and IT.

The Bristol Skills Framework enables our students to recognise their development in academic writing, problem solving, group work and individual and group presenting. We will equip you with the tools to market your skills, your achievement and your potential in whatever career path you choose to pursue after you graduate.

Philosophy students acquire a significant package of analytical skills that prepare them for a wide range of careers. Many employers value the flexibility of thought, the capacity for marshalling arguments in a coherent and compelling manner, and the ability to think and write clearly that philosophy tends to foster.

Our recent graduates include those who have entered the law, accountancy, computing, commerce and industry, the civil service, the media and journalism. Others take their studies in philosophy or related subjects further. A number of well-known professional philosophers were once students at Bristol.

The University of Bristol has one of the best employment records in the UK. We are rated sixth in the UK in the QS Graduate Employability Rankings 2016/17 and are the third most targeted university by top UK employers (High Fliers Research, 2017).

We are looking for students who demonstrate a genuine interest in the central problems of philosophy. Since the subject is not widely taught at A-level, this will usually mean students who have sought out and read some books about philosophy on their own initiative.

Some indication of what sort of questions interest you and have led you to want to study philosophy, and what reading you have done simply to satisfy this interest (ie outside the school curriculum) is likely to impress selectors.

Further information
Find out more about the Department of Philosophy: bristol.ac.uk/philosophy.

Typical offer for BA Philosophy*
Visit bristol.ac.uk/ug18-philosophy for Joint Honours and other qualifications.

A-levels AAA (contextual AAB†).

IB Diploma 36 points overall (contextual 32†) to include 18 points at Higher Level (contextual 16†).

English Language Profile B††

GCSEs Grade B in Mathematics.

†For information on contextual offers visit bristol.ac.uk/ug-apply/#typical-contextual-offers.

††For details of English language profiles, visit bristol.ac.uk/ug-language-requirements.

Selection UCAS or Common Application. We may interview mature applicants and applicants with non-standard qualifications.

Deferred entry Considered but places are limited to ensure fairness to applicants applying the following year.

*The typical offer is indicative only and the University accepts a wide range of qualifications. The information is correct at the time of printing (June 2017); however, we recommend you check the University’s website for the most up-to-date information: bristol.ac.uk/ug-study.
Contact us

Enquiries Team
Tel +44 (0)117 394 1649
Email choosebristol-ug@bristol.ac.uk

If you have any questions about courses, applications or any aspect of being a UK or international student at Bristol please contact the Enquiries Team.

Accommodation Office
Tel +44 (0)117 954 6640
Email accom-office@bristol.ac.uk
bristol.ac.uk/accommodation

Disability Services
Tel +44 (0)117 331 0444
Email disability-services@bristol.ac.uk
bristol.ac.uk/disability-services

Student Funding Office
Tel +44 (0)117 331 7972
Email student-funding@bristol.ac.uk
bristol.ac.uk/fees-funding

University guide to the city of Bristol
bristol.ac.uk/citybristol

If you need all or part of this publication in an alternative format please contact
Student Marketing:
Tel +44 (0)117 394 1573
Email ug-publications@bristol.ac.uk

Photography
Liz Eve (Fotohaus), Patrick Metcalfe, Dan Rowley, Nick Smith
© University of Bristol