PREFACE

This edition of the earliest minute book of the Men’s Meeting of the Society of Friends in Bristol, running from 1667 to 1686, is undertaken under authority of a minute of Bristol and Frenchay Monthly Meeting of the Society of Friends, November 1967.

Here is, for the first time, a record society publication of a volume of minutes from a city meeting for church government in the Society of Friends. It is valuable both for the material it contains and for the opportunities which now open up for comparative work with other cognate records. It can be set beside the Bristol church book of Broadmead Records (ed. E. B. Underhill. Hanserd Knollys Society, 1847), and the two rural Friends’ meeting books which have appeared up to now—the Upperside of Buckinghamshire Monthly Meeting, 1669-1690 (ed. B. S. Snell. Buckinghamshire Archaeological Society: Records Branch, 1937), and Gainsborough Monthly Meeting, 1669-1719 (ed. H. W. Brace. Lincoln Record Society, 3 vols. 1948-51). The contents will be found to cover ground which may be known to a wider public through The church book of Bunyan Meeting, 1650-1821, which was published in 1928 in facsimile from the manuscript entitled “A Booke containing a record of the acts of a congregation of Christ in and about Bedford, and a brief account of their first gathering.”

As the governing meeting for business affairs of the Society of Friends in Bristol, the Men's meeting dealt with all aspects of church organisation: meetings for worship, building and upkeep of premises, finance, oversight of the spiritual and temporal welfare of members, care for the poor, authorisation of marriages, watching over the behaviour of Friends, dealing with backsliders, and representing the city Friends in dealings with meetings elsewhere. The minute book ends in 1686, when Friends re-entered their meeting houses at the close of the final persecution.

This volume includes an introduction dealing with some points in the discipline of the Society of Friends in Bristol, and with the registers and records which are to be found in the Society's archives now deposited in Bristol Archives Office, together with additional biographical notes on people mentioned in the text.

My thanks are due to the Bristol Record Society for undertaking this volume, and to its principal officers for advice and assistance in the course of publication; to the University of Leeds for grant of study leave to prepare this edition for the press; to the librarian at Friends House, London; to the successive custodians of records of Bristol and Frenchay Monthly Meeting, who, for more than thirty years have given me every facility and encouragement to study the records under their care; and to Miss Elizabeth Ralph, Bristol City Archivist, in whose Office the records are now deposited. Without their help this work could never have been done.

INTRODUCTION

Quakers came to Bristol in 1654. By the middle of the 1660s it had become clear that the Society of Friends needed some permanent organisation. The millenium was not just round the corner. The old leaders were passing on, and some of those still alive would end their days in prison. George Fox, recently released from a lengthy imprisonment at Scarborough castle, continued his preaching journeys, and as he went round the country he encouraged Friends to set up more closely organised meetings to maintain discipline among themselves, to order their own affairs and keep records in the Society.

Before this time there seem to have been business meetings in various places, but the death of many of the Quaker leaders, the imprisonment of others, which prevented them from travelling to care for the local meetings’ welfare, and his own long incarcerations all worked together to force George Fox to the conclusion that some form of congregational government to care for the welfare of each local meeting was essential. About four to six local meetings were joined for this purpose, sending representatives to a meeting of them all held monthly at some convenient fixed or movable place. Monthly meetings were joined together into quarterly meetings. At first each quarterly meeting usually covered a county, but as Quakerism did not take strong root, or died out, in some rural areas, counties were joined together to provide suitable quarterly meeting areas. Thus Devon and Cornwall is one quarterly meeting today, and Bristol and Somerset another. The latter junction was brought about in 1784, not because Quakerism had died out, but because there was some feeling that the Men’s Meeting in Bristol, which had met fortnightly since 1667, was liable to act as plaintiff and jury in its own cause. It was the executive meeting for the city of Bristol, and had direct representation at London Yearly Meeting. There was no intermediate monthly or quarterly meeting to which disputes could be referred.

London Yearly Meeting, the central body, was established on a representative basis first in 1673. It was called for May, and (in addition to ministers) it was open to representatives, six from London, three from Bristol, two from Colchester, and one or two from each of the counties of England and Wales (see minute of 8 July 1672; representatives appointed 31 Mar., 14 Apr. 1673).
The central series of administrative records in any meeting is normally the minute books of the Men's meeting, which may date back in unbroken succession to 1667 or 1668, when George Fox was engaged in his work of regularising the meetings for business in the Society all over the country.

In Bristol the first minute book covers the period 1667-1686, when Friends' discipline was developing most rapidly. The heights of the earliest enthusiasm were past, but the Society was increasing in numbers as children grew up. While persecution would keep away many, and perhaps winnow out the chaff, the welfare of members and the good name of the Society called forth much thought and care from the local leaders among Friends. It is interesting to note how the rules for discipline were developed, and to guess which outgrowths were the results of suggestions from Friends from outside, and which were of local origin. More local records will have to be made available for study before such points can be resolved.

The minute books in Bristol are preserved in complete sequence from 1667. Until 1784, Bristol meeting had its own representation at the Yearly Meeting. Since 1784 Bristol has been joined to Somerset, and has formed a monthly meeting in Bristol and Somerset General Meeting (before 1967, Bristol and Somerset Quarterly Meeting). In 1870 a negotiated junction of the Bristol meeting with Frenchay Monthly Meeting (embracing parts of Gloucestershire around the city) brought into existence the present Bristol and Frenchay Monthly Meeting, under whose authority the minute books and other records of the Bristol Friends' Meeting have been deposited in the Bristol Archives Office at the Council House, Bristol.

The collection includes a full series of minute books of the Men's meeting, but the parallel series of Women's meeting books dates from 1755 only. Regrettable as the lack of early Women's meeting books is, the loss is perhaps not so vital as might be supposed. In theory the Men's and Women's meetings for discipline and government in the Society were equal in status, but they tended to have different spheres of activity, and where these coincided the Men's

1 Note the spate of activity in the autumn of 1669, when influential Friends were in the city at the time of George Fox's marriage. Two new books were begun at this time: (i) "Records of dealings with delinquents", B.A.O., SF/A7/2; (ii) "Letters of contrition, etc.", B.A.O., SF/A7/3.

2 From 1855 to 1868 this meeting had the title: Bristol, Somerset and Dorset Quarterly Meeting.

3 There were earlier Women's meeting books, 1673-1702, lettered A to C; see the Catalogue of records drawn up in 1737 (B.A.O., SF/CAT/1). These could not be traced in 1842, and the committee which dealt with the records then had no means of obtaining information as to their disposal. It is possible that they were cash books. The sequence of Women's cash books which survive begins 18 Jan. 1703, but unfortunately they had to be bound by the 1842 Committee, and any previous numbers or letters of identification have disappeared.
meeting always gained control. The day to day administration of poor relief was regarded as especially a task for the women, but even here the Men's meeting eventually ordered that no person should be given relief regularly without written consent from the Men's meeting.\(^4\) This was partly because the demands for the poor often outran the resources normally at the command of women Friends.

The earliest Men's meeting minute book covers a period of close on twenty years, from the time in 1667 when George Fox's Journal records:

> wee came to Bristoll & after wee had had severall powerfull meetinges we setled ye mens monthly meetinge there & ye womens meetinge.\(^5\) right on to the summer of 1686, when the third wave of persecution was over and the meeting houses were reoccupied.

It seems likely that when George Fox came and "settled" the meeting, he was but regularising some previous arrangement, and encouraging the meeting to keep a permanent record of its proceedings. The Broadmead Church kept a record, and about a score of the first Friends came from the Broadmead Church in 1654, so they probably adopted a similar course. If so, it is to be regretted that the meeting settled in 1667 did not preserve the documents produced by its informal predecessor. The likelihood that there was something which went before is increased by the fact that the minute book opens, without preamble or statement of constitution, with three minutes on general business, one authorising a collection, a second detailing two Friends to visit a father who had turned his son out of doors for joining Friends, and a third concerning a traveller to America (20 May 1667).

THE DISCIPLINE

Friends were always careful to watch over the behaviour of their members, so that there should be no grounds for reproach on the charge that they did not live up to their profession. The records of discipline illustrate the action taken, and the measure of failure

\(^5\) Fox, Camb. Jnl. ii. 116. In point of fact the Men's meeting met fortnightly on Monday afternoons, but in the sense that the meeting exercised the functions which in other parts were exercised by monthly meetings, the statement is correct. There is a difficulty here. John Nickalls, the latest editor of Fox's Journal (Cambridge, 1952, p. 517), dates this visit at the end of March 1668. Bristol minutes begin in May 1667. When he wrote up the Journal about 1675 George Fox may have run together two accounts of visits to Bristol, one early 1667 and the second a year later. It may be significant that a new form for recording marriage proposals was adopted by the Men's meeting in March 1668—perhaps at the suggestion of George Fox, who may have been present.
or success achieved in securing consistent good behaviour among the members of the Society. These records reveal the care and persuasion, the admonition and assistance which went on within the body of a Christian society, and gave it a structure which withstood persecution, held to its beliefs and presented to the outside world a picture of integrity and consistency for which many who did not share the truth or acknowledge the validity could not deny their admiration. Old Admiral Penn (no friend of Quakers) at the last told his son: "Son William, if you and your friends keep to your plain way of preaching, and keep to your plain way of living, you will make an end of the priests to the end of the world. Bury me by my mother: live all in love: shun all manner of evil: and I pray God to bless you all: and He will bless you."

If a report of misdemeanour came before it, the meeting would appoint a couple of Friends to visit the suspect, and ask the visitors to give an account of the truth of the matter at next meeting. For persistence in an offence, or for denial of the authority of the meeting in a matter affecting the reputation of Friends, the ultimate penalty was a minute of disunion (perhaps read out at the end of a public meeting for worship) excluding the offender from participating in the business of the Society, and disowning him until he should come to a true sense of repentance and wish to be re-united with Friends. Care was taken that Friends travelling as ministers should be duly accredited to meetings in districts where they planned to visit by letters or certificates from their home meetings. Friends who removed permanently from Bristol would be assured of acceptance in their new meeting when they produced a certificate attesting that they were members in good standing, and removals into the city were likewise acknowledged.

The basis of Friends' view of the discipline was well stated in a letter drawn up by William Rogers for the Men's meeting, and sent to Friends in Virginia and Maryland, 28 Oct. 1669:

There is a Christian obligation incumbent on every member of that holy body and society whereof Christ our Lord is head, to watch over one another & to be reproving one another in the spirit of meekness & of sound judgment; not that thereby only we may respect the particular good of each member of the body, but that alsoe a true regard may be had to the glory of the name of the Lord, that soe his power & spirit may bee exalted over all.

REGISTERS OF BIRTHS, MARRIAGES AND BURIALS

Having denied the validity of the rites of the established church, Friends evolved their own system of government and safeguards against the abuse of the new-found freedom. Marriages were entered into after declaration of both parties in a meeting for worship, but before a meeting for the purpose could be held, the consent of the meetings for discipline was necessary, and the gradual development of the procedure can be followed through the various minutes on the subject in the minute book printed in this volume. Strangers had to produce certificates of clearance from others in relation to marriage signed from their home meetings; consent of parents had to be obtained; appointments were made to inquire into the freedom of both parties from other entanglements. Registration of births, marriages and burials was established. The registers were surrendered to the Registrar-General after the General Registration Act, which came into force in 1837. Before surrender, a digest of the registers was prepared. Copies of this digest are at the library, Friends House, Euston Road, London, and a copy of the digest volumes for Bristol and Somerset Quarterly Meeting is in the archive collection deposited at Bristol Archives Office. Some further registers, which came to light after the first transfer, were surrendered to the government in 1857, and supplementary digest volumes for these entries are kept with the others. The minutes which recur, expressing concern at the state of the registers, show that Friends knew that records were incomplete. Gaps certainly occur in the Bristol registers, but there is no reason to assume that any registers once made have been lost.

The Archives

As meeting business and organisation increased, the Men's meeting set up committees or subordinate meetings, which kept records of their specialised duties. In some cases, however, specialised business of a certain kind would be small in bulk, only infrequent in occurrence, or of such general importance that, although special records would be kept, it would be dealt with in the whole meeting. Such matters were oversight of cases of delinquency, the recording of sufferings and the maintenance of statistics. Towards the end of the seventeenth century and during the following years, special committees and meetings were set up to deal with certain activities. These bodies left records which do not come into the period covered by the present volume. In particular we may mention the meetings of Ministers and Elders, who had the care of the ministry and meetings for worship; and the General Committee, which had the oversight of finance, together with the subordinate Weekly Committee which made cash payments and saw to the administration of property. Some small record survives of the Building Committee which had charge of the erection of the first Friars meeting house in 1670, although there are fuller records of eighteenth-century activities in this department.

Workhouse records are unfortunately incomplete. The Workhouse was established in 1696 to relieve distress among the weavers, and was governed by a committee appointed by the Men's meeting. This institution had a working life of a quarter of a century before it became a home for the aged and infirm poor, and a school for Friends' children. The present Friars meeting house, River Street, is built on part of the burial ground attached to the Workhouse.

Separate financial records survive from the end of the century, and they include the annual collection lists, showing the number of subscribers before the time of official lists of members. There are in the collection abstracts of title-deeds to property and records of legacies and their disposal.

The archives also include a handful of volumes recording relations between Bristol Meeting and other meetings, notably London Yearly Meeting, and the Bristol Yearly Meeting and the peripatetic Circular Yearly Meeting of the Western Counties, which went on through most of the eighteenth century. Negotiations preceding the junction of Bristol Two-weeks Meeting with Somerset Quarterly Meeting are recorded in a volume which continues as a minute book of the quarterly meeting until the end of 1786.

In 1737 the first existing catalogue of the meeting's records was made, but it was not until 1842, as a consequence of the detailed search for registers to be surrendered to the Registrar-General, that active steps were taken for the organisation and preservation of the records. On 11 Aug. 1842 the committee appointed for the purpose recorded:

We agree to preserve and bind in volumes under their respective heads Papers illustrating the antient discipline of the Society, Letters, Certificates of removal, Certificates of clearance for marriage to 1760, and Certificates for ministers on religious service to 1820.

The committee proceeded to do this, and it also repaired volumes which were "much out of condition from age and having at some past period been placed in damp situations". The results of the committee's work in this direction are clearly recognisable in the collection today.

At the same meeting, the committee defined its destruction policy in the following statement:

10 See R. S. Mortimer 'Western Circular Yearly Meeting', Jnl. F.H.S., 39 (1947), 33-44.
31 B.A.O., SF/CAT/1.
It is agreed to destroy all money documents such as bills and receipts from 1700 to 1820 except Attorneys and such as bear on a right to property; Certificates of removal and acknowledgments from 1760 (from which date they are recorded) to 1820; Letters that appear of no value; Dealings with delinquents; Messages between the two Meetings, and sundry papers of the Meeting of temporary interest to 1820, except proceedings relating to marriage, such as relate to records of property, or illustrate from time to time the care and discipline of the Society; destroy all apprentice indentures in which all the parties are deceased, and some other documents of like nature to 1820; Answers to queries and minutes to the Quarterly Meeting which are recorded in the Monthly Meeting's books to 1820; destroy or disperse all printed papers except two epistles and one copy of a report of each kind. 12

In a second report, 27 Oct. 1842, the committee stated:

We have prepared the Digested catalogue of the contents of the repository proposed in our former report. The total number of volumes of records is 78, of which 18 have been collected and bound by the committee.

The Digested Catalogue of 1842, in a copy taken in 1909, and supplemented by an Index made in 1933, still provides a useful survey of the collection, and can be relied on.

The danger of loss of records is illustrated by the following anecdote concerning the earliest Oxfordshire Quarterly Meeting minute book. It contained transactions up to 1760, and was in the hands of a Friend who was disowned and did not return it. When he died and his library was sold in 1809 no Friend remembered that he had had the book. It was bought by a bookseller, who sold it to Dr Routh (1755-1854) the famous President of Magdalen. 13 At length, Friends came to hear of it, and a deputation waited on Dr Routh from the quarterly meeting. The narrative recounted by William Charles Braithwaite in his presidential address to the Friends' Historical Society, 14 tells how the Book was produced, found to terminate at the precise period described, and of course clearly identified. The Doctor described how he came by it, and assured the Friends that he had read the 12 No doubt this policy was carried out, in the main. In the library [MS. case 110] at Friends House, London, is a collection of about 400 papers made by James Dix, clerk to the 1842 committee on registers. The collection includes examples of Bristol Men's meeting proceedings, letters, draft minutes, and certificates of publication of marriage, probably saved at this time and later presented to Friends in London.

13 D.N.B. He is said to have summed up his long experience, when invited to do so by an aspiring scholar, with "I think, sir, you will find it a very good practice always to verify your references."

Volume several times, and always with satisfaction; and in referring to the part the Society took in keeping clear from all political matters, and in the support of their Body, as appeared from the Minutes, he said he consider'd it highly creditable to their character. He then inform'd them that, altho' he set a high value upon the Volume, and had even provided in his will that it should be presented to some Foreign University or Society, yet he consider'd it ought to belong to the Society.

Dr Routh returned the book, and as an acknowledgment of his generosity, the quarterly meeting presented him with ten works written by Friends, "which he accepted with respect and gratitude". It is anyone's guess that the books which Oxfordshire Friends gave then may now be found among Dr Routh's benefaction in the University Library at Durham.

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY RECORDS

Of the archive volumes belonging to Bristol and Frenchay Monthly Meeting now deposited in the Bristol Archives Office, more than a score include seventeenth-century material. In editing this book of minutes the following items have been of particular value:

INTRODUCTION

MEN’S MINUTES, 1667-1686

The basic source for the transactions of Bristol Friends’ meeting is the volume catalogued as “The minutes of the Men’s meeting held once in two weeks from 20th of 3rd month [May] 1667 to 16th of 6th month [August] 1686.” The volume, like its immediate successors up to 1760, is a tall narrow book bound in gatherings of twelve leaves, about 39cm. × 15¼cm., with chain-lines in the paper running horizontally. The binding, in full leather with panelled upper and lower covers, is to the standard pattern adopted by the Bristol Friends’ committee on registers in 1842. There is a red label on the spine, blocked in gold: C.1842 A.1. A paper label, bearing the number 201, gives the number assigned in William Henry Woolley’s supplementary catalogue of 1933. The first leaf is pasted to the marbled end-paper; the verso of the first leaf and the recto of the second bear some index entries; to the verso of the second leaf is pasted a sheet noting references to property matters, dated 10 mo. 1847. The text begins on folio numbered 1, and continues, with slight irregularity in numeration, to 110. This numeration has been retained. To make reference easier, the pages following the simple numbers have been numbered a (or a, b, and c when the numeration has been missed; e.g. in sequence 1, 1a, 2, 2a, 3 . . . 18, 18a, 18b, 18c, 19, 19a . . . ). Folios 76 to 79 have been cut out. The final leaf has been numbered 137.

It will be observed that an additional minute for the meeting of 19 May 1679 has been added from the Duplicate copy (B.A.O., SF/A1/2) which contains minutes from 1667 to 18 Oct. 1680. The Duplicate is similar in size, appearance, and binding to the main book. A note by Richard Snead on the first page explains the existence of the duplicate set of minutes with reference to the Wilkinson-Story controversy (so named after John Wilkinson and John Story, two Westmorland Friends, the “two Johns” of the note) concerning church government in the Society of Friends, when there was some fear of a split among Bristol Friends.

The reason why this booke was made, was a feare that I and several other freinds had, least when that unhappie difference was among freinds touching the two Johns, and strongly supported by several Freinds of this Citty, and mostly per William Roggers . . . least sayd W.R. and others with him would have taken the Mens Meting book from us here, as wee had understood, that some of the same party with them, had taken away freinds Meting booke in Wilsheare16 . . . [This would have been] a great loss unto us, on the account of truths service. And this was the very cause and reason thereof. John Heggins he doen it, and I payd him, my self, for doeing thereof, near Forty shillings, in the yeare 1680. Richard Sneade.

There is no available evidence to show that the original minute book printed here was ever out of custody, but the minutes for 19 May 1679 (for which the Duplicate has supplied additional matter) would have been written on one of the folios (76-79) which have been cut out. Traces of writing are visible on the stubs of these leaves, but there does not now appear any break in the sequence of minutes.

Other volumes in the archives have supplied some further material, notably the volume “Illustrations of discipline” (B.A.O., SF/A7/1). This volume consists of papers bound up by the 1842 committee. It includes “Memorialls of the late Mens Meetings” 1682-1686, which Thomas Callowhill was asked to have entered up in the minute book, 16 Aug. 1686. Other supplementary items are indicated in footnotes to the text at the appropriate points.

THE WORK OF THE MEN’S MEETING

Bristol Men’s Two-weeks Meeting, like the meetings for discipline in the Society of Friends in other areas, was concerned for the spiritual, moral and temporal welfare of its members. It had responsibility for the upkeep of meetings for worship, the provision of meeting houses, keeping records, representing Friends of the city in both their dealings with Friends outside and the civil authorities within the city.

In the course of general oversight of the conduct and behaviour of Friends, in seeking the well-being of the whole, the Men’s Meeting had to do many things. It condemned a variety of faults: drinking to excess and card playing (29 Sept. 1669);\(^\text{17}\) taking oaths; forging a certificate to hasten a marriage (Feb. 1679); running away and changing his name (to that of a highly respected Friend of the city, May 1678); a “divisive spirit” (16 Oct. 1671). It is remarkable how reticent the record can be on matters of contention. For instance, during the Wilkinson-Story controversy on church government, 16 Wiltshire Quarterly Meeting book was taken out of a meeting at Devizes, 1 Apr. 1678 (Jnl. F.H.S., 4 (1907), 119-21; 10 (1913), 182; S.P.Q. 316-7).

nothing is put down for 16 July 1677 when the “Paper of the 66” (dated from Ellis Hookes’ chamber, London, 12 June 1677, and giving the orthodox side in the controversy) was read at the Men’s Meeting. At that time John Story was in the city, and he had been interrupted while preaching in meeting the day before. Feeling was running high. News had come that Westmorland Quarterly Meeting had decided at its meeting, 6 July 1677, to withdraw from meetings for worship held at the houses of disaffected Friends (i.e. those who supported Wilkinson and Story). At the Men’s meeting there was a discussion on the possibility of holding a meeting with the separatists to try and compose the differences. Of this the official minutes say not a word.

A study of the minute books will reveal the care which the meeting took by example and exhortation to encourage in Friends, both individually and in a corporate capacity, the habits and outlook of good faith, honesty and simplicity, which they felt was demanded of them. It has been remarked that the virtues which the puritans laid some stress on were ones which eventually paid off economically. Of this we can sense something too.

Friends kept the meeting accounts methodically. Meeting finance came under the scrutiny of the Men’s meeting. Collections were taken approximately every year to replenish the Stock to meet the expenses of meeting houses and burial grounds, rents and repairs, the care of the poor, the expenses of ministering Friends who visited the city (14 June 1669), and an allocation sent to Friends’ central funds in London for administration and assistance to Friends travelling abroad (for instance, 31 May & 27 Dec. 1669; 9 Dec. 1672; 9 Apr. & 7 May 1677; 25 Aug. 1679; 3 May 1680; 21 June 1686). Treasurers were appointed to keep the Stock and to make the payments, and provision was made regularly for audit (e.g. 18 Mar. & 1 Apr. 1672). It is unfortunate that the accounts for this period are lacking, and collection lists survive only from 1686.

Monies left to the meeting, and legacies in trust for the relief of the poor were carefully accounted for. The rolls of trustees were kept up to date with new appointments (23 June 1673; 8 Oct. 1677; 19 Apr. 1680). In spite of their care however, they were in difficulty when William Rogers, the trustee who held the deeds, refused to hand them over (16 Oct. 1682). At this period meeting correspondence was probably kept in a drawer or box in the meeting house, without any particular safety precautions (12 Mar. & 19 Nov. 1677).

One of the most recurrent causes of concern to Friends in this connection was in registration of births. The repeated minutes are guide to the unsatisfactory nature of the results which Friends felt they were achieving. Procedure was changed in efforts to improve the position. The help of the Women’s meeting was called in (21 Oct. 1669; 15 May 1671; 3 Mar. 1673; 12 Mar. & 9 Apr. 1677; 18 W. Rogers, The Christian Quaker, 1680, ii. 10, 72-84; R. Snead, An exalted Diotrephes reprehended, 1681, 35-40.
1 July 1678; 16 Aug. 1686). In 1678 a form was settled for birth certificates, and a registrar was appointed and paid to keep the register (6 May & 23 Sept. 1678; 1 Dec. 1679; 30 Nov. 1683; 27 Oct. 1684). Having denied for themselves the validity of the baptismal rite of the established church, and thereby rejecting the registration that accompanied it, Friends had great difficulty in establishing a reliable register of births of their children.

The Men's meeting proved itself jealous of its authority. It directed that its business should not be divulged; it forbade an unsatisfactory member from attending its sessions (25 Nov. 1672). It also reacted strongly against the establishment of a separate disciplinary monthly meeting by women Friends without its prior consent (27 Nov. & 11 Dec. 1671). When many Friends were in prison, the Meeting directed that word should be left with the prisoners at Newgate where the next Men's meeting was to be held, so that they could inform any inquirers who wished to bring business before it (Mar. 1682). One procedural point of interest was when a decision was reached by lot on the site for the new meeting house (2 Nov. 1669). In January 1670 the meeting was seeking a clerk, although to judge from the variety of hands which found employment in writing up the minutes, a settled clerk was never found.

The Men's meeting had general oversight of the conduct of the meetings for worship. This sometimes involved measures to restrain boys, and other disorderly persons like "William Davis and the crayzie woman" (15 Dec. 1679), making a disturbance both outside the meeting houses when their elders were worshipping within, and also disturbing the meeting inside the house. This was a problem which Friends never really solved, but it has been pointed out that the "rude boys" of the 1670s were the same as the "children who kept up the Meeting, at the Meeting-House-Door, in the open Streets, in Bristol" in the persecution of the 1680s. 19

The Men's meeting authorised any necessary alteration in the times for the Sunday and weekday meetings on Tuesdays and Fridays. The times of meetings for worship would be varied, for instance, at the fair times when the city was thronged two meetings were held each Sunday at both Friars and Temple Street to accommodate the large numbers expected (14 Jan. 1678). It may be noted here that attendances at the Men's meeting at fair times were probably small, as the merchants and shopkeepers would be busy at their work (8 July 1672).

Proposals were approved for private silent meetings (21 Oct. 1678) in spite of the fear that some of the weaker-willed might find them an excuse for deserting the public meetings for worship if persecution returned, as it did within a few years. The Men's meeting arranged for payments to the porter of the Pithay Gate, for his pains in opening the gate to Friends going to and from meeting on a Sunday (Oct. 1668). A like payment was made to the Newgate porter when Friends had moved to the Friars (Oct. 1679).

MEETING HOUSES

One of the major decisions which the Men's meeting was called upon to take concerned the provision of meeting houses in the city. In Dec. 1667 it was decided to provide a new meeting house, but it took nearly two years and the appointment of a committee of Friends from outside the city (who were in town when George Fox married Margaret Fell) to decide to build on a site on Dennis Hollister's ground at the Friars and on the composition of the building committee (28 Oct. & 2 Nov. 1669). The minutes enable one to follow the process in 1669 and 1670 of securing the site, deciding to build, making collections to finance the building of the Friars meeting house, and the subsequent alterations to it, the addition of galleries, the cleaning and upkeep of the premises, and the resumption of occupation after the persecutions.

The minutes in December 1667 affirm that a meeting house was to be provided south of the river. It was perhaps a symptom of continuing separatist feeling in Bristol, carried down from the middle ages when only after a protracted struggle was the prosperous Redcliffe side of the river incorporated in the city. There are other pointers in later years which could support the view that "Over the Bridge" Friends (as they were known) felt themselves to have interests not always coinciding with, or fully considered by, the more numerous body north of the Avon. However, Friends as a whole agreed to pay for a meeting house in Temple Street (16 Dec. 1667), and it became a general public meeting house equally with the other. The meeting house in Temple Street was opened in 1668, and from December that year the Sunday morning meeting was held there, beginning at 10 o'clock (30 Nov. 1668). The vicissitudes of this house likewise can be traced through the medium of the minutes.

There are also minutes concerning the lease of the rooms under the rented meeting house in Broadmead (Sept.-Dec. 1668), and the final notice to quit that house in August 1671. When Friends left, the Broadmead Church moved in.

After the persecution, Friends had to re-furnish both their houses, and they put in a tenant at the Friars to keep possession for them (7, 21 June & 19 July 1686). There had been a caretaker at the Friars before (30 Oct. 1671; 15 Dec. 1679), and provision had been made for pitching and cleaning the way in from the street (22 Jan. 1672).

The burial grounds in use during the period were the main ground at Redcliffe Pit, portion of which may still be seen near the roundabout in Redcliffe Way, between Redcliffe Hill and Redcliffe Bridge. After 1670 a few Friends were interred at the Friars.
the Redcliffe ground was purchased the registers do not usually give a location for burials, with the exception of a handful buried in their gardens—including some plague victims. To judge from the minutes, there was not so much uneasiness about the keeping of records of burials as for those of births, although remedial measures were taken from time to time. The gravedigger was called in about overcharging the poor (18 Oct. 1669). Later, Friends’ witness for simplicity led the meeting to unite with a testimony against painted and carved tombstones and ornate coffins, and (after some hesitation) to direct that all gravestones should be removed from the burial ground (Dec. 1670, Feb. 1671).

Burials were restricted as far as possible to Friends who were in good standing at death, and a few solid Friends only were given authority to issue burial notes which ordered the gravedigger to prepare a grave (14 Nov. 1670; 30 Mar. 1673; 7 Mar. 1681). This rule was felt to be important. In one case of delinquency it was stated that the person being dealt with was being reproved only because he had been so far accepted as a Friend as to be allowed to bury his child in the burial ground—otherwise he would not have been thought of as a Friend at all (5 June 1676).

DAILY LIFE

In caring for Friends in their daily occupations, from time to time the Men's meeting issued general papers exhorting members to maintain high standards of behaviour (18 Aug. 1673; 25 Mar., 6 May & 17 June 1678). In 1671 the meeting received papers disapproving of “excess, superfluity, vanity & curiosity in the houses and apparrrell of friends”. The meeting had unity with these papers, and presented them to the Women's meeting for their approval (29 May 1671). A fortnight later the meeting called makers of apparel together to exhort them to eschew vanities and excess (June 1671).

A paper was given out warning Friends against the danger of running into bankruptcy (Dec. 1680-Jan. 1681), and a panel of Friends was appointed to give advice and to help in maintaining standards of commercial probity. There was a case where the executors of an estate were being blamed because the debts of the deceased had not been paid. The meeting enquired into the matter and intervened to get this done (19 Feb. & 5 Mar. 1683).

Peter Hawkins was asked not to sell ale any longer than to dispose of his current stock (26 Apr. 1675). Reference to the Men and women's meeting minute of 8 April 1675 reveals that Peter Hawkins, shoemaker, had lately begun to sell ale “and doth entertaine persons in his house drinking at unseasonable houres of the night”. Friends were “offended and dissatisfied therat”.

Conciliation was offered in disputes, which seem mainly to have concerned business deals (15 May 1671; 6 July, 17 & 31 Aug., 14 Sept., 26 Oct., 23 Nov. 1674; 4 Jan. & 21 June 1675; 3 & 17 July 1676; 18 June & 2 July 1677; 19 Apr. 1680). As a corollary to this, Friends roundly condemned frivolous legal actions. The meeting dealt faithfully with one who “confess that he repaired to the majestates, & that the debt he demanded was but 2s. 9d.” (25 Nov. 1672).

Marriage business occupied quite a quarter of the recorded transactions of the meeting. A feature of the minute book is the information provided on the families whose children came to meeting to have their marriages approved. There were matrimonial troubles (10 & 24 Feb. 1679). The procedure evolved for the shotgun wedding (Aug.-Sept. 1674) is illuminating. That Friends’ procedure did not please everybody is revealed in the complaint reported 29 Sept. 1669.

In matters of succession, care was taken of the rights of children in cases where a widow married again, with children of the first marriage living, and in one case enquiry was made as to the security of the rights of the woman in a marriage settlement (Feb. 1673).

Apprenticeship matters came before the meeting in connection with the placing of boys, where parents were poor and failed to make private arrangements for binding them and fitting them out with clothing on entry (3 & 17 June, 15 July, 9 Sept., 30 Dec. 1667; 23 Mar. 1668; 18 Mar., 1 Apr., 9 Dec. 1672; 27 Oct. 1673; 2 Mar. 1674; 3 Nov. 1679). There were also cases of dissatisfaction which arose between master and apprentice, which the parties could not resolve between themselves, and referred to the meeting (5 June 1676; 2 July 1677). Samuel Parsons, for example, was eventually sent to sea. Friends of the Men’s meeting did not approve of apprentices making undue demands on masters (12 Aug. 1677). The Meeting’s proceedings in response to the requests for assistance in apprenticing Thurston Saunders and Isaac Thomas (1672, 1673) illustrate a good many of the points in the methods adopted. If the meeting felt that relations could assist, they did not hesitate to ask that such help should be sought (Elizabeth Andrews, 1674).

In the field of education there is not a great deal to report. John Toppin was proposed as a schoolmaster for Friends’ children (22 Feb. & 22 Mar. 1669; 22 Jan. 1672), but the first master at a school on the Friars premises was Lawrence Steel (27 Apr. 1674; 19 July 1675). He kept school there until his imprisonment in 1682. At this time, Friends probably found the needs of most children could be met privately without setting up their own school.

POOR RELIEF

The Women’s meeting had particular responsibility in the day to day administration of poor relief. Their funds seem to have come from collections among their members, but this source sometimes proved insufficient to satisfy claims made upon it, and the Men’s meeting had to make a grant (for instance, 7 Oct. 1667 for “coales & cheese”). In various circumstances, the Men’s meeting gave money for rent, assistance to get a bed out of pawn (Aug. 1676), although these matters were more usually dealt with by the Women’s meeting. On one occasion a loan was authorised to be made to a man whose house had been burned down (Sept. 1676); iron was provided to keep a blacksmith in work (Feb., Aug. 1671; Jan. 1673; Nov. 1674), grain for a baker (Mar. 1669), money to provide work for poor shoemakers (9 Nov. 1676; 19 Sept. 1681); £3 to one who broke his leg; payment for the cure of an insane boy (Feb. 1675); relief for a sufferer from the king’s evil (Nov. 1679). Loans were made on the security of Friends of the meeting, or on some other security, such as pieces of serge (July 1681).

Friends in business difficulties received good advice as well as financial assistance. The meeting would direct that creditors should be spoken with, or a letter of licence obtained from creditors before Friends would lend any money (17 July 1676; 19 Feb. 1683). Problems involving settlement do not make much appearance in the minutes at this period (24 Nov. 1673). It is too early for the long series of letters which sometimes passed between meetings before they could reach a decision on the support of the poor. Enquiries were made into the good standing as Friends of those who needed relief (7 Oct. 1667; 2 Oct. 1671; 3 July 1676; 25 Feb. 1678; 12 Jan. 1680). On one occasion the family of a poor Friend was to be stirred up to help (2 Mar. 1685). Charges for boarding seem to have varied between 3s. per week (food, lodging, washing and mending, for one of apprentice age, 20 Apr. & 4 May 1668) and £10 per annum (for a child, 20 Mar. 1671).

Relief for persons outside the meeting ranged from the help for the family of Thomas Parsons of Portishead, who died a prisoner at Tichester in March 1671 (20 Mar. 1671; 22 Jan., 5 Feb. & 4 Mar. 1672; 27 Oct. 1673), and the offers of assistance to Gloucester (11 July 1670) and west Gloucestershire suffering Friends (22 Oct. & 5 Nov. 1677), to the aid given to Wenlock Christison preparing to go to New England (20 May, 3 & 17 June, 15 July 1667) and to travellers windbound in port waiting for transport to Ireland (13 Oct. 1673; 3 Dec. 1677). Collections were made for the redemption of captives in the hands of the Turks (26 Oct. 1674; 8 Sept. 1679; 12 Jan. 1680), and a contribution for Friends suffering from persecution at Danzig and Emden (3 May 1680).

Collections were taken for losses by fire recommended to Friends’ charity for George Embry, a Friend of Southampton (5 & 19 Aug. 1672), for Friends of Cullompton and Bradninch (8 & 22 Aug. 1681, in advance of the brief issued in 1682 for that fire), for Northampton Friends (5 June 1676), and on the briefs for fires at Fordingbridge (29 Sept. & 8 Dec. 1673) and Wem (25 Feb. 1678).22

The payment for a horse (Aug. 1669) was probably for the use of Friends travelling in the ministry, perhaps to provide a mounted guide to accompany such Friends to their next appointment at a meeting in the country. A minute of 14 June 1669 provides for the use of a formula which would conceal the names of travelling Friends who received their expenses, or had their lodging and stabling paid for by the treasurers.

Sufferings

The “sufferings” of Friends, that is the hardships they underwent for the sake of religion (or, as the title of Joseph Besse’s Collection of the Sufferings, 2 vols., 1753, expresses it, “for the Testimony of a Good Conscience”) are exemplified in court records of the period. At different times Friends found themselves charged with plotting against the government, charged under the Blasphemy Act, 1650, proceeded against as vagrants and charged with travelling on the Lord’s Day, with disturbing church services and refusing honour to magistrates. After the Restoration, the Quaker Act, 1662, and the Conventicle Acts of 1664 and 1670 provided ready means to break up meetings for worship, which were also proceeded against as riots. The oaths of allegiance and supremacy were tendered to individual Friends, and there were instances of fines for absence from church, and for refusal to find a man for the militia.

The Men’s meeting did what it could to mitigate the impact of sufferings on Friends. When Friends were kept out of their meeting houses, and were inhibited from pursuing their claim to possession because William Rogers held the deeds and was unwilling to give them up, the meeting took what steps it could to clarify the position and regain possession. The meeting memorialised the deputy lieutenants when distresses were levied because Friends did not appear in arms for the militia (July 1675); the sheriffs were approached to try to get William Ithiel out of prison (Jan. 1679; not released until 1680). The meeting kept the records of sufferings in the city, and kept in contact with London Friends. It handled the distribution of relief to prisoners in Newgate and Bridewell (Apr. 1684), including sums supplied from Friends in London, in York and Ireland.

Records of sufferings are not mentioned on many occasions (2 Dec. 1667; 21 June, 19 July, 16 Aug., 13 & 27 Sept., 11 Oct. 1675). Events during periods of suffering sometimes reveal what was going on (22 Aug. 1670, Second Conventicle Act; 20 Feb. & 6 Mar. 1682, Friends in the prisons to be told of meeting business for better publicity). The minutes reveal little of the attempts made by Friends to alleviate the sufferings of the prisoners (21 Aug. 1682; 5 Feb. 1683; 28 Apr., 26 May, 24 Nov., 8 Dec. 1684).

Friends' testimony against the acceptance of a double standard of honesty, and their refusal to take oaths, bore hardly on men who had served their apprenticeship in the city but could not take up their freedom without taking the Burgess oath (7 Dec. 1674). Some individuals were dealt with for having taken oaths (3 Apr. & 7 Aug. 1671; 13 Oct. 1673). This bar to full citizenship was not finally overcome until after the Affirmation Act, 1696 had been passed. Then Friends were able to renew their application to the city chamberlain, and arrangements were made for Friends' affirmation to be accepted in place of the oath of a burgess.

The provision of books for spreading Friends' views was one of the works undertaken by the Men's meeting. For many years it was in the hands of John Wear. In 1668 he was paid 4s. 6d. for books sent to Wales (20 Apr. 1668). Book accounts were presented (20 Nov. 1676; 9 Feb. 1680). Apart from collecting accounts of sufferings for printing, the meeting also had under consideration a collection of the works of Camm and Audland, so that a memorial volume could be printed to bring back to Friends' memories the labours of the two men who came out of the North and established Quakerism in Bristol (1 July 1678; 8 Sept. 1679). This work did not appear until 1689.

At other times the meeting considered printing an account of the sufferings during the mayoralty of John Lawford, 1664-65 (no trace of this work has been found), the paper of advice drawn up by the meeting itself (June 1678), and the forms for birth certificates.

Apart from the passage of certificates of removal for individual Friends, the minutes illustrate relations with other meetings and with Friends overseas by references to the distribution of the printed accounts of Friends' sufferings in New England (20 Aug. & 23 Sept. 1667; 26 Aug. 1669) and keeping up the records (21 Oct. 1669). Books were sent to the West Indies (5 Jan. 1674). Letters on disciplinary matters went to Virginia and Maryland (29 Sept. 1669; 5 & 20 Jan., 7 July & 18 Aug. 1673; 14 & 28 Sept. 1674). The certificates of removal or for clearance for marriage to Jamaica, Antigua, Nevis, Rhode Island and Pennsylvania (5 Mar., 20 Aug., 3 Sept. & 29 Oct. 1683; 13 Apr. 1685; 16 Aug. 1686) must represent only a small proportion of Bristol Friends who went across the Atlantic as traders or settlers.

SOCIAL STATUS

From the Quaker evidence available at present, some 10 per cent of seventeenth-century Friends whose names and stated occupations are known to me were described as merchants. Perhaps eight Friends were members of the Society of Merchant Venturers. The famous that all men that are dealers, even in shop trades, launch into adventures by sea, chiefly to the West India plantations and Spain. A poor shopkeeper that sells candles will have a bale of stockings, or a piece of stuff, for Nevis, or Virginia, &c.

Men of this stamp might on occasion be called merchants, and might even rise to be known as such consistently, while others would more normally be designated by some more limited appellation. The spread of occupations is shown below. The figures for percentages are given to the nearest whole number, and occupations represented by 3 per cent or more of Friends have the appropriate percentage figure alongside. It can be seen how strong the Society was in the clothing trades, and how meagrely represented at the top and bottom ends of the scale.

Within each occupation group is probably hidden a wide variation in status, and it is not possible to describe this without much more detailed evidence. Information is insufficient to warrant any detailed statement on the location of industry. Only the most obvious conclusions can be drawn, such as the strength of the seafaring interest in Stephen's parish and elsewhere on the quays, and down river; the concentration of weavers in the suburbs of Barton Regis and Bedminster; and the little colony of whittawers at Broad Weir.

For a fuller study, reference may be had to a paper by W. A. Cole, entitled "The social origins of the early Friends".25 Professor Cole favours the view that "it was among the more hard-pressed sections . . . that Quakerism was most influential". It is true, however, that early Friends did not come from the poorer classes alone. The local leaders in Bristol included successful shopkeepers and merchants like Dennis Hollister, Thomas Gouldney, Charles Harford, and Edward Pyott. The last-named, when he was arrested with George Fox at St Ives in 1656 on a vagrancy charge, offered on the spot (in order to prove that they were no common vagrants) to buy from the magistrate before whom they appeared goods to the value of £1,000, or to sell him goods to the same amount.26 Nevertheless, it was noticeable to contemporaries at the end of the seventeenth century that prosperity was increasing among Friends. One contemporary reminded Friends how it had been with them in the beginning of the movement, and how they had been preserved throughout the persecutions:27

The Lord has given Riches, and made up your Losses both in London and Bristol (especially Bristol), I mean what you have lost by suffering for Truth.

Industry was bringing a reward. Benjamin Coole is one who springs to mind. He came to Bristol from Devizes, and settled here in 1689. Achieving rapid success in trade, he used his good fortune to back industrial enterprise at Baptist Mills and elsewhere. This earned him some envious looks. George Keith, in controversy with Friends over church government, brought this rapid rise to affluence up against him. Coole retorted 28

That Reflection on me as if it was, but Lately I left the Loom, being a poor Lad, but am now worth Hundreds shews how hard he . . . is put to it—for were it not that things are at a very low Ebb with him; he would not, surely have wounded me with that

NOTE ON TRANSCRIPTION

The aim in this edition has been to reproduce the text as finally left by the clerk of the meeting when he drew up each minute, and also to indicate any amendments in the text, made at the time of the meeting, which add to the sense of each item, or which show how the final wording was arrived at. Deleted matter which adds to the sense is indicated in a note.

A note in the text indicates the addition of further material (usually at a subsequent meeting, to report action, to add supplementary names to an appointment, or the like). Such additions often begin with the date, but a note "Added later", has been made wherever necessary. Scribal errors and repetitions, whether amended in the original or not, are ignored when they add nothing to the sense.

Square brackets enclose added matter; usually interpolated to elucidate the sense (for instance, the names of months are added to the numbers) or as a necessary correction to spelling.

Abbreviations and contractions have been extended, except for proper names, money statements and the ampersand. Superior letters have been lowered except where it could cause confusion.

Modern practice has been adopted in capitalisation generally, over i and j, and v and u, F (for ff), and in adopting the, them, then, their (for ye, ym, yn, yr, developed from the Old English þ (Thorn)).

Minimal punctuation has been provided where necessary.

Friends eschewed the naming of days and months after heathen gods. In Quaker documents, Sunday became First day; Monday, Second day; and so on to Saturday, Seventh day.

Up to 1752 under the Old Style Julian calendar, the English New Year began on Lady Day, March 25. March therefore was First month; April, Second month, and the following January and February were Eleventh and Twelfth month (of the old year) respectively. Dates from March 1 to March 24 may well have the double year dating (see 1667/8, heading the minutes for 9 & 23 Mar. 1668). On occasion the double dating may be carried back towards January 1, as 21 12mo. 1680/1 (for 21 Feb. 1681).

In transcribing the minutes modern month names have been inserted in brackets in the date line at the opening of each meeting. In editorial matter the New Style for months and years (beginning in January) is used.

And therefore wee disowne the sayd marriage, & our being therat; notwithstanding that wee then as witnesses signed a certificate of his marriage. And of this wee desire all friends to take notice, that through this occasion of ours, none forth; & haveing signified to friends that notwithstanding all [p. 4] their Endeavours soe to convince him, hee remained the same man standing in opposition to friends, & the justification of his miscarriagges; It is thought meet by Friends that on the next Sixth Day at the publique Meeting the Declaration of friends (which is in the words following) against that his sayd marriage, & the evill president therof bee read, togethther with the Paper of acknowledgment signed by certaine friends whoe were at his sayd marriage; & that Thomas Callowhill bee desired to read it. And that a copy of the sayd Declaration, & the hands therunto subscribed bee sent to Friends at Oulstone to bee read at their Meeting as they shall think fit.

Wheras Hen. Pritchard came to friends at the Mens Meeting desireing to bee married to Mary Smith, (late of Oldstone Meeting in the County of Gloucester) in the way of friends, & Friends therupon in the prosecution of the matter, upon the testemony of Friends had face to face before him, finding him upon sufficient profe, to bee not only of a bad conversation; as, too much given to drinking; breaking of his promise; lying (having denied his owne brother) but seeking severall, besides the sayd Mary, for his wife; & some of them within the time that hee sought the sayd Mary; (as by his owne words did appear) & sometimes makeing use of the Name of the Lord therin. Besides diverse unkindnesses, & ill useadge to his late wife (a sober friend, with whom hee had a considerable estate as to the outward, in reference unto him) to her great discouragement & greife of heart, (as by words out of her owne mouth before her death, did appear) the sayd Mary, & himselfe being both present; with severall other miscarriagges then proved before him, toe long to mention, & which wee think fit at this time to pass over with silence, & soe to pretermit; And wheras upon the whole of this matter; & his bad, & unruly carriagge, & continuall denyalls of what was proved to his face; Friends at the Meeting with one consent, not one contradicting but all joyning togethther, one by one gieveing their Judgment, did declare to him, & the sayd Mary in the presence of the witnesses; That the testemony given against him they did beleive; That they were not satisfied with his denyalls, & answers; & for that cause could not consent to, nor approve of his marriage as then it stood, unless hee judged himselfe & soe became sensible of his miscarriagges, bowing to that of God in him, which judged, & would judge such miscarriagges as it was waited upon, & suffred to judge; which when it should soe appear, friends declared their readiness then to proceed further to doe in answer to his desire what to them appertayned; or should seem meet; till which, they gave him their advice to forbear marrying with the sayd Mary; & that if hee should marry her, ere such conviction was they should disowne it.

Now forasmuch as the sayd Hen. Pritchard, notwithstanding all this friendly advice for his good, & brotherly dealing, hath got together several friends, & others, & by lyes, & false suggestions persuaded some, & enticed others into a compliancy with his desires (several of whom [p. 4a] being convinced of their surprizeall & error in that particular have subscribed their hands to a Paper acknowledging accordingly) & soe hath taken the sayd Mary to bee his wife; These are threfore to testefy unto all friends to whom these presents shall come That wee of the Mens Meeting aforesayd for the welordering of things amongst us for the service of Trueth, doe disowne the sayd marriadge, as not being done in the Trueth, but in, & by a lye; as alsoe the manner of the doeing of it; & the coming together of those whoe were present therat; as a breach of good order, & doe desire all friends of Trueth to take notice therof. Bristol, this 13th 11th Month 1667.

W. Rogers, & W. Yeamans having spoken to W. White serjeant concerning his son, & hee seeming resolute in keeping him out of his house & not takeing care to look after him: George Bishope is desired to speak with Abraham Vines his late servant about his son, if soe bee hee bee willing to perfect him in writeing (& with Thomas Taylar alsoe if the former shall bee unwilling) concerning the perfecting him in writeing & arithmetick; & give an account to the meeting how he finds them therin; to the end friends may consider [what] further is to bee done for him, who was soe turned out because of his conscience, by his father, & that in the meantime W. Maynard bee desired to let him have diet with him, for which friends will consider to satisfy him.

24th 12th Month [February] 1667

Thomas Bisse, & Edw. Martingdale are desired to perfect the lyst of subscriptions towards the chardge of the service of Trueth; & to deliver the papers when they have done to the Meeting or such are appointed receivers for the same.

Friends, being not satisfied with Benjamin Maynards taken to wife Ann in the publique Meetinghouse without acquainting the Meeting of friends, & haveing their approbation as to the publication therof first, & being informed that several friends were greived with his soe takeing her, which was alsoe without any publication of that his intent beforehand, as is right & meet, & the order of Friends, to the intent, that upon such publique notice, if any have ought theragainst they may have opportunity to acquaint friends. Least this alsoe should bee a president to others as hath been the case of Hen. Pritchard, they doe think fit, that their testimony against his soe marrying be adjoyned to that against Hen. Pritchards, & that it bee read in the publique Meeting with that of Hen. Pritchards.

Edward Daniell is permitted to cause the intention of his marriage with Sarah Bishop to bee publisht in our publicke meetinge house.

SPQ 312.
The 11th of the 10th moneth [December] 1671

Dennis Hollister, Thomas Gouldney, Charles Harvord, Miles Dixson, William Foord & William Roggers according to the order of friends the last meeting went to the weomens fourntights meeting, and the accowmpt that they retorne to the mens meeting, and in which they all six agree, is to this effect.

To the first Question. That Margret Heale of her selfe, and not by order of any meeting, published the weomens monethly meeting in the publique meeting house.

To the second Question. That a letter of George Fox's, dillivered & read in the weomens meeting as sent from the mens meeting was the ground which occasioned the proposig & concluding of the weomens monethly meeting.

Upon examination of the matter concerning the dillivery of George's letter: Friends generally doe conclude that that letter of George's (which was directed only to men Friends and not to weomen friends) was not the letter intended by the mens meeting to be sent to & read at the weomens meeting, but that the paper recommended by the mens meetinge was a paper against vanity & excess.82

That the weomen friends (not agreeing amonge them selves) apoynted a meeting on purpose to waite upon the lord if peradventure they might come to unity amongst them selves touch­ing that monethly meeting, at which meeting they agreed to reffer it to the wisdome of god in the friends of the mens meeting.

Upon weighty consideration of the matter friends of the mens meeting, haveing a deepe sense upon their spirrits that tis their duty to mind only those things that tend to peace, and being in a sence of that which followeth after peace, doe with one accord conclude that the best expeedient for ye preservation of peace amonge the body is to desire the weomen Friends to forbeare the said Monethly meeting untill such tyme they have unity amonge them selves & with the mens meeting conserneing the same, and accordingly the friends of the mens meeting doe with one accord desire that the friends of the weomens meeting doe for beare the said monethly meeting untill such tyme they have unity among them selves and also with the mens meeting concerning the same.

Tho. Gouldney is desired to diliver a copie of the above order to Mary Gouldney & Elizabeth Pyott, Isabell Yeamans, & Mary North, to be by them communicated to the weomens meeting.

82 See 29 May 1671.
Whereas Charles Woodward came to this meetinge desiringe to bee reconciled to freinds & signified that hee hath some paper or papers to shew that duringe the time of his beinge last in the country, friends had nothinge against his conversacion, hee therefore with his father are ordered to bee present next meetinge & to bringe such papers as hee hath from country freinds concerning his justifi­cation or unity with friends there. Thomas Watkins is desired to take care to bring such papers as concern C. Woodward's former disorderly conversacion in the country, & Edward Martindale, and Wm. James are desired to enquire against next meeting into his conversacion of late amongst freinds of this citty & to give report thereof to the next meeting.

A paper given forth by M.H. [Margaret Hale] was read amongst freinds at this meetinge, & shee proposed to freinds that it might bee read in the third, or sixth day Meeting. The advice of freinds was that shee should further waite to bee directed in the wisedome & power of God to publish it, otherwise then in those meetings, unto such whome it might concerne. Her answer was that shee received the councell of freinds & so left the paper with us.

Friends having thoroughly weighed the matters proposed to them by Charles Woodward do conclude to give him this answer: vizt. That friends at present cannot answer his request, & therefore desire him to wait upon the Lord, that he may feel God's judgments for his horrible transgressions: & then as through the judgments he comes to find mercy; friends do believe they will have a sense thereof, & unity with him. And until then they do exhort him to forbear his presuming to declare, preach or pray in publick meetings; whereby several friends have been much burdened.

11th of the 9th Month [November] 1672

A collection for the publicke services of truth was this day concluded to bee propagated amongst freinds, and Jno. Batho and Wm. Itheild are ordered to perfect the Collection against next Meetinge.
Upon the reading of a letter directed to the freinds of this meetinge from the friends of Rosse in their monethly meetinge assembled concerning diverse miscarriages of Thomas Browne of this city, wee finde:

1st. That they charge him, that upon a difference between him and Jno. Cater about some small matter of mony, hee repaired to the magistrates & made the matter as odious against the freind as hee could, concerning which being askt hee confest that hee repaired to the magistrates [p. 38] & that the debt hee demanded was but 2/s. 9d.

2ly. That Thomas Browne said to a freind whome freinds of Rosse doe assist that hee must say as other freinds said for hee was an almes man which Thomas Browne confest also.

Many other things wherewith hee is by said letter charged hee denyes; and whereas freinds of Rosse in said letter charges that Thomas Browne accused our mens meeting to some freinds of Rosse of being partiall in our proceedings, & said if a poore freind come hee was not regarded but if a rich freind brought anything before freinds that past or words to that purpose; to which his answers were not positively denying, but evading a plaine answer the most hee could.

Hee further charges all of those freinds except two who subscribed the letter from Rosse as if they were unworthy freinds & that their testimony is not to bee received, though a good testimony for them was given amongst us by John Moone of our city who hath knowledge of them; for which cause, & for that wee know him to bee of a buissy minde, of a darke understanding & of little sense in the truth, wee have all one by one judged him unmeet to frequent our mens Meetinge, & therefore have desired him to forbear assembling with us in this our mens Meetinge untill such tyme the freinds of this Meetinge are satisfyed concerning his worthynes to come amongst us.

Whereas there hath been some neglect in bringinge in the births of the children of freinds to the Womens meetinge to the entent that they may be recorded, Erasmus Dole at the request of freinds hath undertaken to manage that service, and for the better accomplish­ment thereof the advice of freinds is, that Erasmus Dole speake to his wife, or some other woman freind usually frequentinge the Womens Meetinge to undertake the charge and care of enquiring every womens meeting amongst the freinds thereof, Whether they know of any freind lately delivered, & if they shallbee inform'd that there hath been any, then that the Womens Meetinge doe undertake to give the charge of bringing in the names of such births to the Womens meetinge unto some particular person or persons among them, to the entent that Erasmus Dole may receive the names of all births from them, & record the same in an orderly forme according­ly, & that inasmuch as there are many spaces in the booke of records left blanke, Erasmus Dole at the request of freinds undertakes that what is already recorded shalbee transcrib'd anew.

the same but will consider thereof & intends to give his answer next meeting.

James Murford appeared and Friends laboured with him to bring him to a sense of his condition, thereby to help him out of the snare.

He confesseth before this meeting that he wronged Dennis Hollister in what he said of him, & farther acknowledgeth that he ran out in unseemly behaviour towards him being provoked, and also that contrary to the testimony of truth in his conscience he was married by a priest & promises to consider how he may publickly condemn the same, which is referred to be again inquired into at another meeting.

Stephen Somers of this city Taylor & Sarah Peeke Junior have this day signified their intention of marriage. Sarah Peeke mother of the said Sarah was present signifying her consent & approbation of the marriage, and the said Stephen informes us that he hath no parent nor guardian in being.

This Case being proposed to this meeting:
That if it should happen that any young people or others, that profess the truth with us, being under a contract or proposition towards marriage, and before they shall accomplish the same shall fall under the temptation of the Devil defearing themselves to the prejudice of their own souls and dishonouring of their intended marriage, and after being brought under a true sense and sorrow for their miscarriage doe desire the advice of friends in order to their marriage. And since the law of god [in margin: Exo. 22: 16. Deuter. 22:28, 29] and equity requires such should marry it is enquired how far friends should concern themselves therein,

It is Mutually agreed:
That such a marriage being not honourable may not be approved to pass in these meetings according to our accustomed manner: nor can we, if they be really sensible of their miscarriage and doe desire advice, wholly reject and cast them off & leave them open to the temptations of going to the priests. But if they under a true sense and sorrow and brokenness of heart being bowed downe under the judgments of the Lord doe condemn their miscarriages, then it is desired that some expedient may be found out to help such that they may not be lost, but this is not in the least intended to hinder judgment from going forth against such disorderly walkers as refuse admonition and doe not truly repent.

It is referred to Dennis Hollister, Thomas Gouldney, William Foord, Charles Jones, Charles Harford, William James, John Love, Thomas Callowhill & Richard Sneed or any five or more of them who are desired by this meeting to find out & prepare some forme and method touching the said case to propose to the next meeting for their aprobation.
The 14th of the 7th month [September] 1674

According to the desire of the former meeting Dennis Hollister, Thomas Gouldney, William Foord, Charles Jones, Charles Harford, William James, John Love, Thomas Callowhill and Richard Sneed, proposed to this meeting as followeth, which being considered and approved off is recorded as followeth:

Whereas the case aforesaid was by the former meeting referred to us: Dennis Hollister, Thomas Gouldney, William Foord, Charles Jones, Charles Harford, William James, John Love, Thomas Callowhill, Richard Sneed to find out and prepare some method of procedure touching the said case.

Wee the persons above named have in the fear of god and for his precious truths sake taken the matter into our serious considerations, as having also an eye to the good of their souls who have or may enter into the temptation and snare of the devil, that they may not be utterly lost therein, but regained if possible to have a part with us in the grace and truth of God which condemns all filthiness and disorderly walking. And according to the understanding given us wee propose this method for an expedient in the case aforesaid in the following particular.

Viz. First, that our meetings may not be farther troubled with marriages of this kind let five wise and prudent Friends of this meeting be nominated and appointed by the meeting to take care & inspect the cases aforesaid, to consider and advise the parties concerned as in the wisdom of God they shall see cause and the parties meete to be taken notice of or advised, when any such matter shall be brought before them or information given to any of them.

Secondly, if any miscarriage happen of that kind among any professing the truth, that information be given to some or one of those friends appointed to take care as aforesaid, and upon such information some of those friends so appointed to make inquiry and search into the matter, and in the council of the lord and his power to see into the condition of the parties that have offended and accordingly to endeavor their recovery by bringing them into a sense of their evil and condemnation & judgment upon it. And if they find a tenderness in them and a willingness to receive admonition and submit to the truth, and council of god in friends and be bowed under the judgment of the lord: that they advise them to give or sign a paper of condemnation against themselves for their miscarriages to be delivered to those friends who endeavor their recoverie and adviseth them for their good.

Thirdly Seeing they cannot with clearness or Safety be advised either to publish their marriage amongst us or goe to the priests, and there being a necessity from the law of god & equity for their marriage; a form of certificate may be allowed them of their takeing each other to be man and wife and of their promise each to other in that case to be signed by themselves and those who shalbe present at their marriage.

Fowerthly, that they be advised to procure such of their relations neibours or friends as are free to be present at their marriage to be wittness and signe such their certeficate, which in number shall not be less then ten or twelve.

Fifthly, that such of the friends to whom the care of this bisson-ness is committed (who have given admonition and councell to the parties concerned) provide and signe a paper containing a testem-yony for truth against the disorderly walkeing of the parties and of their endeaver to reclaime them and the effect it had upon them, togeather with their judgment and advice concerning their marriage and the reason of it.

And this said paper soe signed to be keept in readyness to produce as a deffence for truth and friends against the adversaries reproaches, which paper or testemony the said friends appoynted may make manefest according to the offence when and where they shall see cause upon serious advise togeather, for the cleareing of truth and the friends thereof, whos testemony is for god against all disorderly walkeing, and their labour for truth and righteousness, and that noe soules may be lost nor keept in the enemise snare.

Lastly. That a copie of friends testemony and of the parties condemnation and the certeficate of their marriage be recorded togeather in the book of papers of condemnation to be in readyness to produce when there may be occation.\[^{22}\] relating to truth in the City of Bristoll, the 19th day the 5th month 1675.

Whereas Mathew Warren of this city and our meeting is desirous to take to wife Judith Daniel the younger of your Meeting, and hath applied himself to us for a certificate to that purpose, we do therefore certify you, our beloved friends and brethren, that upon examination of ye matter we cannot find but that he is clear of all engagements to all other women on that account, and may marry whom he please only in the Lord: but whether the said Judith be so clear in the sight of God, or not, we make some question, and leaves it to the wisdom of God in you to determine, because some time since she came to this Meeting with one Daniel Neale of this city and propounded marriage with him, mutually declaring their satisfaction and consent therein. And the Meeting putting some questions concerning ye man, Judith Daniel the Elder, mother of the said Judith the younger being present, declared that she saw him & knew him well, & was satisfied in him as a fit husband for her daughter, & had unity with it; and how near this comes to a marriage in the sight of God, we leave to the wisdom and witness of God in you to judge, to whom it now immediately appertaineth. And we ourselves were not clear until we had thus certified, believing that marriages in the truth with which friends hath satisfaction & unity, are not bought and sold or made & broken for money, but stands in an Everlasting Covenant of life and righteousness:

To our beloved friends of ye Men's meeting for ordering ye affairs relating to truth in Keinsham or Bristleington or elsewhere.

Signed in ye name & by ye unanimous consent & appointment of the Meeting by us—

William James Richard Sneade Thomas Watkins
Charells Harvord Richard Vickriss

Which letter Richd. Vickeris and Charles Jones Junior are desired to forward.

21 By this time most Friends had been in prison for a couple of months. The meetings for worship were kept up by the children, who were set upon by the constables, put in the stocks, or sent to Bridewell for a few hours to frighten them. Two weeks before (6 Aug.) the children who met outside the Friars had been beaten by John Tilly, the constable on the Weir, with a whalebone-stick; J. Whiting, Persecution expos'd, 1715, p. 76.

Minute asking Richard Vickris to speak with Thomas Callowhill who holds the counterparts of the deeds of Fryers meeting house to see if he can help Friends regain possession of the property long illegally detained from them, and not claimed by Friends because the title deeds are detained by William Rogers.

Minute asking Friends not to desire to have or invite great numbers to buryings at this juncture while our public meetings for the worship of God are so thin and meanly supplied.

Minute recording concern that public meetings for worship are reduced to so low and mean an appearance, and authorising a solemn meeting to stir up Friends to faithfulness therein. Lawrence Steel and Richard Vickris to consider the matter further, and inform Edward Hackett for more general notification.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

These notes concern persons mentioned in the text. They supplement information given in the minutes, and do not essay to be thumbnail biographies.

For the abbreviations consult the Bibliography and Key to Abbreviations (pp. xxx-xxxiii).

From the mid-nineteenth century Digests of the registers, and from other sources, an attempt has been made to give the years of birth and death, parentage, occupation, place of abode (as given at successive periods), marriages and number of children. The information from the Digests, although generally to be relied on, has been found defective in particular cases. There are duplicate and variant entries, and the treatment of Old and New Style leads to confusion in dating. Digest information here, although thought to be correct, should not be accepted uncritically without recourse to the original registers.

Where no town name is given following the parish or ward name, Bristol is to be understood. The name of the parish of St Mary-le-Port in Friends' records (which in any case drop the prefix) generally appears as Maryport, and that form has been adopted for brevity. It will be seen that the notes, following the sources at this period, do not normally distinguish between the In and Out portions of the parishes of St Philip and Jacob (shortened to Philip's) and St James, so it is usually only when one has an alternative location for residents in Barton Regis that one can be sure that they lived outside the city boundaries.

Other notes come from manuscripts in the archives and in other collections. It will normally be clear whether statements without express reference come from any of these sources or from printed sources listed in the Bibliography. Details of 'sufferings' can be traced in the contemporary printed accounts and in the omnibus collection in Besse, Sufferings. References lead also to printed books for further information, and in particular to Norman Penney's editions of Fox's Journal, which give useful biographical notes and references.
