There were notable differences between the penal system of eighteenth-century England and eighteenth-century France which are reflected in the literature of the two countries. In order to find out more about the English system, I looked at a number of judicial records. One of the most valuable sources in Bristol was the Gaol Delivery Fiats which deal with more serious crime, not with the petty offences which were summarily dealt with by the magistrates. The Fiats throw a great deal of light on life in eighteenth-century Bristol, and although we no longer have all the files corresponding to each case, these records can be compared with similar records in London, and the information can be supplemented from Felix Farley’s Bristol Journal and material in the Bristol Record Office concerning some of the offenders.

This volume could not have appeared without the kind assistance of Miss Mary Williams, the invaluable help I have had from Miss Elizabeth Ralph who kindly read and checked the manuscripts and typescripts over a long period of time, the untiring patience of Professor Patrick McGrath, and the generous help of members of the staff of Bristol Record Office and the Bristol Reference Library. I am also grateful for help received from the Public Record Office and Her Majesty’s Stationery Office. I also wish to thank Mr John F. Mackeson who has an interest in Gaol Delivery Fiats similar to mine and who published his own study in 1987.

INTRODUCTION

This volume contains the text of the Gaol Delivery Fiats which have survived for the period 1741-1799, and it also includes in the appendices some examples of related documents such as the calendars of prisoners, examinations and depositions from the quarter sessions records, and some material relating to the transportation of prisoners to Australia.

The series of Gaol Delivery Fiats in the Bristol Record Office is incomplete, none having survived for the years 1742-1744, 1749, 1756-1757, 1760 and 1762. From 1762 to 1780 there is at least one for each year. It is difficult to establish how frequently the gaols were delivered, but there is evidence to suggest that sessions of Gaol Delivery were held at least twice in 1745, 1746, and 1761. Although they are not a complete record, the fifty-four Fiats printed here show how the Court of Assize, Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery dealt with serious crimes in the second half of the eighteenth century.

Gaol Delivery Fiats were the product of a court sitting under the king’s commission of Assize, Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery. They are orders issued by the court and signed by the Judges. By a charter of 1373, Bristol had been made a county in its own right, with its own sheriff, on the grounds that it was difficult for Bristolians to leave their business to attend assizes in Gloucester and Ilchester. It was to have its own Court of Assize, court of Quarter Sessions and a court of the Mayor and sheriff. In 1499 a body of five Aldermen, one of whom was the Recorder, was established in Bristol. The aldermen were to be justices of the peace and were to be appointed by the mayor and commonalty and not by a commission of the crown. In his charter the king stated that ‘We have granted . . . to the aforesaid Mayor and Commonalty, and to the said five Aldermen . . . (of whom the Mayor and Recorder of the said Town shall be Two) that they may be Justices of the Peace . . . to deliver all the said prisoners within the said Town of Bristol, the Liberties and Precincts of the same . . . from time to time, as often as need shall be, according to the Law and Custom of the Kingdom of England . . . and in the same manner to do, exercise and execute, as far as any other Justices for the Delivery of our Gaols, exercise, enjoy anywhere in our Kingdom . . . ’

In 1581, the number of aldermen was increased to twelve, including the Recorder. By a charter of 1710 it was laid down that the Recorder and Town Clerk should in future be men ‘expert in the laws of Great Britain.’ The Recorder at the time of his election had to be a barrister of at least five years standing, and the Town Clerk a barrister of three years standing.

The Recorder was an important figure in the judicial life of the City. Common Council was always very careful in its choice and picked people of renown in the legal profession. In this period Michael Foster, later knighted, was Sergeant-at-Law, and in 1745 was made a Puisne Judge of King’s Bench. John Dunning his successor was Solicitor General in 1768 and was made a peer in 1782. The Hon. Daines Barrington became a Puisne Judge in 1778. Vicary (later Sir Vicary) Gibbs was Sergeant-at-Law in 1812, Justice of the Common Pleas in 1813 and later Lord Chief Justice of the same Court.

The Court of Oyer and Terminer and Gaol Delivery dealt with major crimes such as high treason, murder, manslaughter, arson, highway robbery, rape, sodomy, piracy, forgery, coining and housebreaking. It should be remembered that the number of offences made capital by statute approximately trebled between 1688 and 1802.

A large number of offences were, of course, dealt with summarily by Justices of the Peace, and others were dealt with by Quarter Sessions. An offender might appear before Quarter Sessions, receive his sentence and be sent to prison. For more serious offences, he could be remanded in prison to wait for the next session of Assizes and Gaol Delivery.

When the time for next Gaol Delivery drew near, the Clerk of the Peace would prepare a list of all prisoners to appear in court. This was the Calendar of Prisoners. It gave the names of the persons in prison, the names of the committing magistrates, the date of the arrest and the nature of the crime. At the Assize and Gaol Delivery, every one then locked in the gaol had to appear in court, even if he had already been sentenced. Consequently, a number of times we find the formula ‘let him/her remain on the former orders/commitment’ as well as a reminder: ‘convicted at the Quarter Sessions of the Peace held on . . .’ It should be noted however, that the Fiats before 1771 do not appear to include people in the prison who had been convicted at Quarter Sessions. In the Fiat of 4 April 1771 it is stated that David Evans who had been convicted at General Quarter Sessions on 22 March 1771 for trespass and violent assault and who had been committed to gaol for three years was to ‘remain on his former order.’ Daniel Regan received similar treatment. William Osborne, George Osborne and Elizabeth Longford who had been convicted at Quarter Sessions for various felonies and who had been ordered to be transported to one of the American colonies for seven years were to remain on their former orders.

From 1771 onwards the Gaol Delivery Fiats regularly give details of those in Newgate who had been convicted at Quarter Sessions. It is not clear why such offenders began to be included in 1771 and not earlier.

There must have been a considerable number of documents prepared in connection with the various cases, but unfortunately the Gaol Delivery Fiats are all that remain of the Gaol Delivery. They record briefly the verdicts on the various offenders. There is, however, detailed information about the proceedings in a volume preserved in the Bristol Reference Library entitled By Permission: The Whole Proceedings on his Majesty's Commission on the Peace, Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery, for the City and County of Bristol: Held at the Guildhall in the said City, on Saturday the 11th, Monday... Number 1. E. Farley, 1767. This gives a complete report on the trial with the questions put to the accused and his answers, and the evidence of witnesses.

The fact that the Gaol Delivery Fiats have been preserved among the archives of the City of Bristol is no doubt explained by the peculiar position of its magistrates under the Charter of 1373 and later charters. Normally, one would have expected to find such documents among the judicial records at Westminster. It is interesting to note that London, whose series of records are in so many ways similar to those in Bristol, also retained its Gaol Delivery Fiats. There is one series for the City of London and another for the rest of London and the county of Middlesex. The first set is in the London Record Office in the Guildhall, and is entitled Minute Books of the Sessions Papers. The second set is in the Greater London Record Office and History Library, and they are listed as Gaol Delivery Books and Old Bailey Session Papers.

Among the crimes which appear in the Gaol Delivery Fiats are a number of cases of murder and of manslaughter. The punishment for the two offences could be very different. The first conviction for murder in these records is that of Matthew Daley for 'the willful murder of W. Sullivan' (8 September 1746). No indication of pardon appears and the assumption is that he was executed. On the other hand, Jonathan Chaney who was found guilty of manslaughter was punished simply by being 'publicly burnt in the hand' (9 April 1752). On 6 April 1797 William Davis and Elizabeth Smith were both found guilty of manslaughter, and George Lader was found guilty of Grand Larceny. The first two were burnt in the hand, fined one shilling and committed to Newgate, he for one month, she for twelve months. Lader, however, was transported for seven years.

Sometimes the Court expressed its horror of a crime by inflicting an unusual punishment. Thus Patrick Ward who was found guilty of murder was ordered to be 'hung in chains' as near as possible to the place where he had committed his crime (19 October 1761). To be hung in chains was considered particularly ignominious, for there was no Christian burial and the body was left to rot on the gallows. George Browning was sentenced to be dissected by a surgeon after his execution (April 1773), but it is not clear what happened in the end as the case was still pending a year later. Christopher Merchant was indicted for murder but the verdict was manslaughter. He was burnt in the hand and sentenced to one month in prison (25 April 1778). At the same Gaol Delivery, John Lovelace was sentenced to be hanged and dissected, but his execution was stayed until June 5. He came up again until 1781 after which he is no longer mentioned. There is no reference to his being transported and he was presumably hanged.

There are a few cases of infanticide immediately after the birth of the child. The fear of being questioned by the parish officers who were responsible for the poor may have induced a number of women to kill their babies. Such women could only escape punishment if they could prove that the child was still-born. Catherine Gardner was executed for the 'murder of her female Bastard Child' and it was ordered that her body should be dissected (15 April 1755). Jane Roston was also accused of a similar crime, but she was acquitted, being too ill to be brought to trial (5 April 1773).

There were a number of cases involving physical violence which did not end in murder or homicide. John Murry was sentenced to be hanged for shooting at a man in the street (16 September 1786). Robert Burrell and three other men were found guilty of a violent misdemeanor, fined £2 each and sent to prison for one month. For an assault, John Gibbons was fined only one shilling, but Thomas Welch was fined £20 and sent to Gaol for nine months for attacking R. White 'with a drawn cutlass.' James James threatened and assaulted his wife 'from which behaviour she goes in Fear and Danger of her Life.' He could not produce sureties and was committed to prison, but he did not appear again.

Piracy occasionally occurs in the records. John Trott and Jonathan Pearson were indicted for piracy on the high seas (25 April 1778). John Williams and James Stoneham faced the same charge in 1766, and a few years later George Hunter and William Townsend were indicted for both piracy and murder (24 September 1781).

Sexual violence against women does not appear very often. John Jones was punished with one year's imprisonment for the attempted rape of Elizabeth Nicholls (26 Aug. 1775), and for actual rape James McGuire was sentenced to be hanged. Daniel Baynton was charged with abducting an heiress who was under age so that she should marry Richard Vining Perry. The amount of the bail which Baynton was required to produce was the very large sum of £1,000 as well as two sureties for £500 each (7 April 1792). The trial was postponed for two years. On 12 April Perry himself was acquitted. He and his wife were apparently very much in love with each other.

There are two cases of bigamy. James Stephens successively married two widows, the former of the two being still alive. He was sentenced to be burnt in the hand (3 April 1777). Earlier on, John Farrell had been punished in the like manner for the same offence.

Sodomy or buggery ("Crimen quod non denominandum est inter Christianos") was severely punished. An attempt to commit the offence was enough to lead to an indictment. James Morgan was acquitted (19 August 1751), but William Cottle was fined 6s. 8d., was to stand in the pillory for an hour, was imprisoned for a year, was required to find two persons to give sureties for his good behaviour and was himself bound over for £40 (31 August 1753). William Crichett and Richard Arnold were sentenced to death, and William Dillon Sheppard was executed for the same offence in 1761.

The death penalty could be imposed for certain kinds of theft. Stealing from a shop, warehouse, coach house or stable of goods worth five shillings or more, stealing from a house or from vessels in navigable rivers worth forty shillings or more was a capital offence, and in such cases the Gaol Delivery Fiat records the amount and the nature of the offence.

Other kinds of theft came under the heading of Grand Larceny or Petty Larceny, depending on the value of the goods stolen. There was considerable variety in the punishments imposed. Henry Peek and Virtue Roberts were only burnt in the hand, but the next three convicts were ordered to be transported for seven years (23 March 1741). For petty larceny, William Matthews was sent for three months to the House of Correction, but Virtue Roberts got two years’ hard labour. When Thomas Butler and Jane Eldridge were convicted of Grand Larceny, Butler was ordered to be burnt in the hand and committed to the House of Correction for one year, but Jane Eldridge was ordered to be transported for seven years (8 September 1746). In 1786 Samuel Cox was ordered to be transported for seven years under the act of 4 George III c. 32 'for punishing stealers of lead or iron bars, fixed to houses or any fences belonging thereto.'

The records also contain a number of examples of fraud. John Barry was indicted for forging a will. John Robinson was indicted for forging a bill of exchange, as were a number of others. Both offences could involve the death penalty. John Day was lucky in that the document he forged was not 'Within the statute'. He was remanded and tried for a misdemeanour. Coining and counterfeiting bank notes and promissory notes were frequent offences. Nathaniel Bowyer tried to make use of a false sixpenny silver coin and got a sentence of six months in prison and was required to find sureties (19 August 1751). John Baker, D. Morgan and R. Pitt tried their hands at counterfeiting halfpennies. They were fined a shilling and sentenced to a year's imprisonment. John Richards and Francis Lane tried to coin 'one gold piece of good and lawful current money.' They got a year's imprisonment and were required to find sureties for two years (3 April 1799). George Evans who falsely endorsed a bill of exchange was removed to the London Newgate on a bill of habeas corpus so that he might be tried in London. When Catherine Jury tried to pass herself off as the wife of a seaman in order to get his wages, she was sentenced to death. Receiving stolen goods would also result in heavy penalties. Terence Bryan Sheene was sentenced to be transported for fourteen years for this offence (30 April 1783).

Although the verdict of the jury and the sentence of the court were not subject to appeal as was automatically the case in France at this time for all capital convictions, the royal prerogative of mercy was frequently exercised by the Sovereign on representations from the Justices and the Recorder. The records often state: 'But execution is respite until &c.' which must be read in full: 'until his Majesty's pleasure be known.' It might be in fact a considerable time before the convict knew his or her fate. It was noted at the Session of April 1779 that William Sheen had been waiting since 11 April 1776, and Hannah Jones, single woman, since 3 April 1777. The mention of 'single woman' was of importance, since a married woman was assumed to be under the necessity of obeying her husband, and if they were both indicted for the same offence, she was presumed to be under his authority and thus less guilty.

Transportation to America, which had begun slowly under Charles II, became very common under George I as a punishment for 'robbery, larceny, and other felonious taking and stealing of money and goods.' Convicts were shipped to America and the West Indies, but the regular flow of involuntary emigrants was brought to an end in 1776 when the American colonies declared their independence. For a time, some Bristol convicts were sentenced to work on the London hulks. This was done under an Act of 16 Geo III c. 43 which stated that 'Whereas transportation of convicts to his Majesty's colonies and plantations in America... is found to be attended with various inconveniences, particularly by depriving this kingdom of many subjects whose labour might be useful to the community... such convicts, being males, might be employed with benefit to the publick in raising sand, soil, and gravel from, and cleansing the river Thames; or... kept to hard labour of another kind within England... not less than three years, not more than ten years.'

There were many unsatisfactory features about transportation to the American colonies. Daniel Defoe's Moll Flanders made its readers aware of the conditions of the passage overseas. Moreover, those convicted in England often had to wait a considerable time before they were transported. An act of 8 Geo II c. 15 expressed concern that 'offenders lie several months in gaol after conviction, whereby they are rendered less capable of being useful to the public in the parts of America where they are sent.' The Act provided that there should be immediate orders for transportation after conviction, but it was not very effective as far as Bristol was concerned, especially towards the end of the century.

Captains of ships conveying convicts overseas entered into bonds with the government to convey the prisoners, an example of which can be read in Mr. John Mackeson's study, Bristol Transported.

When America declared her independence, there was some delay before the government found an alternative for the purpose of transportation, and the first convoy to Australia did not sail until 1788. It is interesting to find among the Bristol Gaol Delivery Fiats details of a man who was sentenced to be hanged, but who was pardon on condition of his agreeing to be transported to Africa and enlisting in the local garrison (James Emanuel, April 1782).

The Gaol Delivery Fiats printed here give a great deal of information about the names of convicts who were transported to America and Australia. The first mention of Australia in the Bristol Gaol Delivery Fiats is on 30 March 1790 when John Sneedon was pardoned on condition that he agreed to be transported for fourteen years 'to the Eastern Coast of New South Wales or some one of the islands adjacent.'

Further information about Bristolians who were transported to Australia is to be found among the records of the Public Record Office, and some of this information is included in Appendix C.

The Gaol Delivery Fiats do not lend themselves readily to the compilation of statistics about crime and punishment in this period but Mr. Mackeson has compiled a number of statistical tables in chapter 2 of his Bristol Transported. We must remember we have only part of the evidence, and at least 57 Fiats are missing. Moreover, persons already sentenced at Quarter Sessioin or at a previous Session of Gaol Delivery appear in court several times. Again, there seems to have been a considerable fluctuation from one year to another in the number of persons who were tried. Thus in March 1785 the Justices tried 57 male offenders, but only 32 in September 1786 and only 15 in September 1787. Only twice were there more female felons than male ones: in September 1746 and March 1780, but the proportion of male to female offenders varied considerably from year to year.

In the fifty-one years covered by these Gaol Delivery Fiats the total number of persons tried was 1,124 men and 398 women, a total of 1,522 or nearly 30 per session. Again, one must not read too much into these figures. What is particularly interesting is to see the number sentenced to death or transportation. England had the reputation of sending yearly to the gallows more people in proportion to its population than other countries in Europe. It must be here remembered that the death sentence was often commuted to one of transportation, but nevertheless sentence of death had actually been passed. Often we cannot be sure whether an individual was executed, transported, or given a free pardon. The figures we have suggest that 128 men were sentenced to be hanged, or 11% of the total number of the men who came before the court. Twenty-six women were also sentenced to be hanged or 7% of the total appearing in the records. Eighty-eight of the men are known to have been reprieved (62% of those sentenced to death) and nineteen women (73% of the total sentenced). We do not possess any tables for Bristol comparable with those drawn up by Sir Theodore Jannsen in London, but the general impression is that as far as crime is concerned, the situation in Bristol was not worse than in London.

In conclusion, it may be said that for all their limitations the Bristol Gaol Delivery Fiats make an important contribution to the study of crime and punishment in eighteenth-century Bristol and to our knowledge of many different aspects of the City's life.

APPENDIX B:

Quarter sessions Papers: Informations and Examinations.

There is a great deal of information about criminal activities in Bristol in the voluminous bundles of Quarter Sessions papers which are stored in chronological order in the Bristol Record Office. Some of this material has been studied by members of a group working on the Bristol archives in classes organised by the Extra-Mural Department of the university. The results were produced in typescript form in Notes on Bristol History no 9, 1971, prepared by the Extra-Mural Department. There is a copy in the Bristol Record Office. Acknowledgement must also be made to Mrs. Joyce Morris who made a typescript transcription of the documents relating to the case of James Miller who was persuaded by James Pearce to attempt to murder Pearce's kinsman (see the first three documents printed below). Mrs Morris retained the original abbreviations, but in this version they have been extended. The documents are to be found in Quarter Sessions Papers: Informations, Examinations and Inquests, May-December 1783.

Information of James Miller:

The voluntary confession and examination of James Miller of the Hundred of Henbury (Redwick and Northwick Tything) in the County of Glocester taken before me Sir John Durbin Knight one of his Majestys Justices of the Peace in the City of Bristol this 23d December 1783.

About three weeks ago or a little more I was at work for Farmer Player cutting wood near Henbury. Farmer James Pearce who lives in Henbury Parish came to me, asked me if I knew Higgins and what he said to another man when he asked him a question. I said I dont know, he then asked me if I could keep council. I said I could midling. Then asked me if I knew his kinsman in Bristol. I said I did not. Asked me if I would come to Bristol next morning, told him I had no business there and no money to spend. He said I should not want for money if I would come with him. Pearce then said his kinsman was mortal Idle and did spend his money and was going to sell the King David, that he was fitter to be killed and was not fit to be alive, said twas all his if he did dye without a will without he did put or give away any thing to any body else. Proposed to me I would kill him. He would give me fifty pounds. I said I could not do it myself. If I could have any body willing to do it for me, I would do it. He said he did not care which way it was done only have it done. Pearce swore that if I would not have his kinsman killed he would kill me. It was between three and four of the clock when Pearce came to the wood to me. Nobody to my knowledge saw us. I was in a good way from any house, was with me nearly an hour before he went away. He asked me if I would come to his house to meet him next morning between eight and nine o’clock. I said I would. The next morning I went to his house, saw him and said good morrow, Master Pearce. He said good morrow James his wife and two children were at breakfast; he then asked me if I would go to Bristol. I said I would. I said I asked him if he was going he said yes. and we both set out together. He talked of his kinsman Robert part of the way. Said he was a lawyer and that he would show him to me. When I was to get some body to destroy him out of the way and he said he should have his riches. On the way he did not see me willing to do it. Said no money should be wanting and he would give me sixty guineas if I would do it or have any body do it. In the way called at the Blackmoors Head at Hopkins, drank two or three pints of ale to the best of my knowledge. Hopkins was within, believe I saw him. Then left Hopkins’s house and came to Bristol to a great alehouse near the market. Believe tis called a coffee house. We drank some ale there. Mr Pearce went to dinner there. It was upon a Wednesday and in the day went to his kinsman’s house as he said but whether in the morning or afternoon I dont know it. We went from thence down to Corners in Broadmead, we eat and drank together there. Pearce on the road described his kinsman to be a little man in a pair of new boots half mourning and in a light colour coat. We left Corners house together.

It was then late and went to St James’s churchyard together and bid about there a good while. Pearce wanted me to do it that night, but I said I would not and we stayed a good while in the churchyard for him to show him to me. Farmer Robert Haskins our neighbour saw us at Corners together and drank with us. He said his nephew was to come out of a house in the alley between the church yard and Saint James’s Barton. We did not see him that night. Pearce wanted me to lye in town. I said I Would not. At last he persuaded [me] to do it and he would find a lodging. We walked from the churchyard together. Pearce enquired at some house near Milk street for lodging. The man that looks after the watch, I believe the master of them, came by. Heard us enquire for lodging, told us we could not have a lodging that night. Woman from the window said the same. The man went before us. Master Pearce told him that we could not have a lodging any where and he then bid us go to his watchhouse the corner of St James's churchyard. We both went there and stayed there till about five o'clock till watchhouse shut up. I then wanted to go home. Pearce would not go but said we would see his kinsman somewhere or other that day. We then went to a publick house the other lower corner of St James's churchyard, stayed there untill about eight o'clock. Then went to a publick house in Baldwin Street near the back, had some sprats dressed there. We then went upon the Key near the Bridge. He showed his nephew's house and bid me take notice. He left me there and went to the Hotwells. I stopped there some time and afterwards went about the back and Key and afterwards went to the Hotwells where Pearce appointed to meet me at Mrs Paynes near the Black Horse, met Pearce there, he would have me come back along with him to town again. We both came together as far as the drawbridge. Pearce left me. I came along up into town. I had thought to go home and went to St James's churchyard to go Stokes Croft way home. There to the best of my knowledge, I met the kinsman by description. It was in the day. Had a striped surtout coat and boots on. I followed him from St. James's Churchyard to town near the Council house from thence I went into Redcliffe Street the sign of the Fox where Pearce told me to come. Met Pearce there, had a pint of ale. Pearce paid for it. We came away together. Asked me if I had seen him. Told him I believed to the best of my knowledge. Came near Bristol Bridge. Asked me if I had any money. I said I had not. He then gave me three half pounds. Bid me go into St. James's churchyard again there to wait for him as he was sure he would come this way home. Said then he did not care how 'twas done only have it done. Pearce went home. I went to St. James's churchyard, the man there was digging a grave to bury a person out of the Mint. When it came about five o'clock I went home, got home about eight o'clock.

The next morning I went to work to Mr Player again. About four or five days after Farmer Pearce came to me again while I was in Farmer Players ground digging potatoes in the morning about seven or eight o'clock. Asked me how it did not happen to be done that night. I said I did not see him. He told me I did not stop long enough to see him. Then asked me when I was going again. Said I did not know. He then said will you come to Bristol next Monday and meet me at the Three Cups on the Back. I told him I would come if I could have any body to come with me. He answered 'twas better to do it myself than to have any body come with me. I told him I could not do it myself I did not chuse to do it. He told me to do have it done any how he did not care which way 'twas done. Then he went away. This I believe happened on a Friday. On the Sunday following he came to my house. My wife was at home, several people were there. Old Susanna Rosewell was there and I believe Robert Parfitts wife saw him in the Barton. He called me and asked me the reason 'twas not done, for the purpose of talking to me. Asked me what time I would come to town. Told him 'twas no use to come to town at all. Pearce asked me what did I undertake it without I was sure to go through it. I said I dont chuse it. I promised to do it because you said you would kill me. He again asked me if I would come to town next morning. I told him I would. Pearce then left me. On the next morning I got up and went to the sign of the Crow near Henbury, had a pint of drink which I drank. Tom Evans was there putting a saddle on a mare for some woman coming to Bristol. Known Evans these three or four years. I went out to him, called him into the garden, and said Tom Will you come to Bristol with me to fetch some smuggling goods. He asked me if I could have it. He said if I thought you could, I will come but if I thought I should not have it, he should not chuse to come to lose his days work as he had been drinking all Sunday. Then we went into the house had two quarts of gin hot. Then came from there together towards Bristol. Talked some time about the smuggled goods. Hard by Bristol I told him we could not have the smuggled goods without killing one man, and I said he should have five pounds if we would do it. I said it I counted it could be done without any body's seeing us. He said he would stand true to do it if he though he could do it without any body's knowing it. He then said he was afraid he should be hanged. I then said he must take all chances for that, we then agreed to come down to the Three Cups on the Back. We came there, had some ale and eat some spratts there. After we began eating and drinking Master Pearce came there. To the best of my knowledge Master Pearce eat some with us. We all three left Corners together and went towards Mile Hill. Pearce said he would go and see for his Cousin was somewhere on Mile Hill where he used to put up.
Pearce left us and went away towards the Blackmoors Head. In our way we got two sticks out of the hedge. Tom Evans took one and I took the other. I pulled out my knife and cut them short about as long as my arm. Carried such sticks a little way and hid them on the side of a dung mixen in the field. We designed to kill Master Pearce's kinsman with these sticks if we could have the heart to do it. Before Mr Pearce left us at St Michael's Hill he told us to go to the Blackmoors Head and said he would come after us by and by but that we must come back to Bristol that night. We stayed at the Blackmoors Head till towards ten o'clock then Pearce came and went into another room. Pearce afterwards called me and said if we did it, to put a chalk mark with a cross on a board in the shed place where they do sit in the summer time before the door as he should stay there this night. He went into his room, and I went into the other, stayed there some time. Then Tom Evans and I came back together, picked up the two sticks and came to Bristol, bid about the Bridge on top of the Key about a quarter of an hour, came into town about ten o'clock. After staying there that time could not have the heart to stay longer. Both of us went into the public house having first having hid the two sticks at the bridge. The public house in Bell Lane stayed there an hour or more. I went to sleep there upon the chair.

We left the house, took the sticks and went through St James's churchyard to look for Mr Thomas Pearce. We walked through there up Stokes Croft, went to the Crow at Henbury, lay there in a Tallett for two or three hours, then I went home. I never saw Farmer Pearce after that until last Sunday. He then came to my house. Thomas Payne, Susanna Rosewell and Parfitt’s wife were there and saw him come. He called me out. Asked me what time we came home. Said he was going to Bristol Monday again, asked if I would go with him. I told him I had no business. He then asked me two or three times to come. Said if I would come he would be at the ale house at the bottom of the steps coming into Christmas Street. I did not say whether I would come or not. Yesterday I had not victuals in the house for my wife and family and I came for half a bushel of flour to Bristol. Went to the public house in Christmas Street Pearce, was not there. Then I intended going home, but was taken into custody.

The mark of James Miller

Information of Thomas Evans:

The voluntary confession and examination of Thomas Evans of the Hundred of Henbury (Tything of Almondsbury in the County of Gloucester) Labourer taken before me, Sir John Durbin...this 23d December 1783.

Last Monday seven night I was at work for Mr Isaac Pearce at the Crow in the road to the passage about half an hour after ten in the morning. James Miller came there, called for a pint of ale after which he had a tankard of gin hot. While Miller was there I saddled Mr Isaac Pearce’s mare for Mr Haskins’s maid the lawyer. After that James Miller called me out, said he wanted to speak with me in the garden. Told me he wanted to speak with me. Asked me if I would go to Bristol with him. I told him I did not chuse it. Miller said he would be bound I should get five pounds by Wednesday night if I would come with him. I asked him what ’twas or what ’twas about it. He said he was afraid to tell me. I asked him if ’twas in the regard of smuggling. He said ’twas to get some rum and tea. Then said, I will go with you. Then went into the house, had another tankard of gin hot. Miller paid for them both. Then we set out to come to Bristol together. Near the turnpike in the new road, Miller told me he was to have sixty guineas to kill James Pearce’s nephew. I said Damn thee doest thou think I want to get myself hanged? He then said the [sic] must stand true. I said I will have no hand in it. He then swore by his damnation, if I did ever peach or discover it he would shoot me or blow my brains out. We came forward to Bristol and after we were in town, Miller told me James Pearce was to meet him at the Three Cups on the Back. He then told me that James Pearce and him about a week or ten days before had been in town and stayed untill two o’clock in the morning and that they had waited untill two o’clock at the head of the Quay.

We came into Bristol down St. Michael’s hill through Horse Street and the thoroughfare to the Stone Bridge. Miller, as we passed between between the thoroughfare and the Bridge shew'd me the house where Pearce the nephew lived. From thence we went to the Three Cups on the Back, had a quart of ale, and some spratts. Had not been there long when James Pearce the Uncle came in. Soon after he spoke to Miller and then drank out of the tankard we had been drinking out of. We all three left the Three Cups and came along the Back together. James Pearce spoke to Miller some words going along the Back which I did not hear. At the bottom of High Street Pearce parted from us. Soon after which Miller told me Pearce was to meet us at the White Hart in Union Street. We went there. Before we had been there a quarter of an hour, Pearce came to us and had a can of ale. Drank with both of us. Pearce went from the White Hart and left us there. Miller afterwards told me Pearce was gone to Corners in Broad Mead. We both went there. We found Pearce. As I believe no Persons were in the house but we three and Mr Corner. Miller and myself had a pint of ale. Pearce had also a pint of ale but did not drink with us or take much notice of us. We all three left Corners together, came up athwart the ground by the Montague towards the Gallows and went to Hopkins's at the Blackmoors Head. In the fields from the Montague to the Gallows Pearce said to Miller and me where are your sticks. Miller answered, we will have them presently. At the Gallows Pearce left us and went down the road. We went down the fields. Miller told me then that we were to knock Pearces nephews brains out with sticks. He pulled one stick out of the hedge and I pulled the other. Miller cut'em both to the length of about three foot each. We met Pearce at thestile leading into the road from the fields, having first hid the sticks near the roadside in the field under a dung heap. Before we hid the sticks, Miller told me Pearce has said we were to come to Bristol again that night. We then all three went to the Blackmoors Head, stay'd there until one o'clock. Pearce went into one room and Miller and myself to another. While we were there Pearce came out into the kitchen, but I cannot say whether to speak to Miller or not. About ten o'clock Miller and myself set out from the Blackmoors Head and came to the Stone Bridge at the head of the Quay just by Thomas Pearce's house about eleven. Stay'd there about five minutes. In the way from the Blackmoors Head we took the two sticks from the dung mixen, and after staying on the bridge hid the sticks by a draw, then went to the public house kept by Jennett in Bell Lane. Miller went to sleep and stop't a full hour. We then came away from Jennett's, fetched the sticks, went along Halliers Lane but Bridewell Gates being shut, returned to Lewins Mead.

Miller told me there that Pearce had told him his nephew used Mr Saunders in the Alley leads into the Barton and that St James's churchyard was as a likely place to meet him as any where. We went through the churchyard but did not stay, up Stokes Croft through the turnpike to the Crow at Henbury. We lay in the Tallett there until near six o'clock. I never saw Miller or Pearce or either of them from that time until Monday (yesterday). On Saturday night I came to my brother Daniel Evans, who works at the Salt warehouse at the head of the Quay. He told me James Pearce was enquiring for me Friday and that Pearce had said to him he (meaning me) knows our concerns. My brother asked me if I owed Pearce any money. I said I did not. With that I told my brother all that had happen’d, he was angry with me that I had not told him what had happen’d on the Saturday when I was in town. I lay at my brother’s that night. In the morning went home and told Mr Isaac Pearce at the Crow of it. He advised me to come to town of the Monday. On which day said Mr Pearce and I came into town. As we were coming along I saw James Pearce the Uncle coming up Westbury butts. We met each other upon the hill. He asked me if I knew where I was running so fast. I said I do. Came to town, went to the Montague, there met Mr Pearce the nephew where told him the story. From thence came into town. Mr Isaac Pearce and I went to Mr Weavers for a warrant, he would not grant one. Mr Isaac Pearce then bought some goods and gave it me to carry home as I was going by Mr Thomas Pearce’s house. At the Stone Bridge I saw Miller standing by the corner. Asked him how he did. Went on my brother’s, left the things and returned back into town. Saw James Pearce in custody. Told one of the officers the other man was there about Pearces houses. He came with me, met Miller in Halliers Lane, and took him into Custody.

Examining of James Pearce:

The Examination of James Pearce of the Tything and Redwick Parish of Henbury in the County of Gloucestor taken this twenty third of December 1783 before me Sir John Durbin Knight one of his Majestys Justices of the peace for the City of Bristol.

I know James Miller, dont know where he lives if he do live in that house of Farmer Haskins that’s in Redwick & Northwick. Knows Farmer Player, dont know as James Miller worked for him; he might and might not. DONT know Farmer Player has any wood in that neighbourhood, never went to any place where Miller was cutting wood. I did not come into town with Miller but saw him about three weeks ago at Mr Corner’s in Broad Mead I believe. Thomas Payne of Henbury was there and that Farmer Haskins of Henbury was also there. James Miller and I went to Corners together but I dont rightly know where ‘twas I met with him that day. I am not certain whether Miller came to my house this morning. I had seen Miller at the Blackmoors Head at the foot of the Down that day and drank with him. From thence I came to Bristol. I dined at the West India coffee house that day with Farmer Haskins, Thomas Payne and Farmer Tovey of Compton. But did not as I believe see Miller there. From the West India coffee house I went to Corners in Broad Mead where I saw Miller. DONT know whether Corner was at home. From thence went up to the Griffin. Thought to have lodged there. Could not get a lodging there. We asked at several places for a lodging but could not get one. While we were asking for a lodging one of the watchmen came by. I believe a woman looked out of the window and said we could not have a lodging there. After that we went to the watchman that had passed. He told us we might have a lodging in the watch house. Miller and myself lodged in the watch house that night. I had a little business with Mr Corner and I thought to have bought some nails. I dont chuse to mention the business I had with Mr Corner. I did not mention my nephew Thomas Pearce to Miller that day. Miller and myself stay’d in the watch house until the watchmen went off the stand which was at five o’clock in the morning. Then we went to the public house in the churchyard near the Horse Fair, stay’d there until seven o’clock. We went out of the house together. I went about my business, he went about his.

I went to the Hotwells, to Abraham Payne at the Ship at launch just this side of the Black Horse. After we left the public house in the Horse Fair and before we parted we went to the Three Mariners in Baldwin Street and had some spratts. Miller I believe came out of the house with me. I went to the Hotwells. Miller afterwards came to me to the Hotwells at Payne’s house. Very likely Miller might come out of Payne’s house with me but I had no connection with him. Whether I saw him about the boat yard or not I dont know. I came into Bristol to go up St Michael’s hill in my way home from Payne’s house at the Wells. I had no business in Bristol. But came that way to go home. About a fortnight after this but I dont know how long, I went to Miller’s house which is situate in the Tything of Redwick and Northwick near Farmer Robert Haskin’s to look if I could find a man to go to work with me. There’s a good many do live in Miller’s house besides himself. There’s Robert Parfitt and his wife, Rosewell and his wife who is called Old Susanna and several others. I did not see Mr Miller. To my knowledge from the time I left Miller at the boat yard I never saw him untill Monday seven night last. Then I went into the Three Cups on the Back. There I saw Miller and another man, I believe his name is Evans, eating spratts together. I had not seen Evans before for twelve months, I believe. Evans asked me to drink out of their quart which I did. Dont know what time of the day it was. Dont know whether Evans and Miller came out of the Three Cups before or after me. I knew nothing of them. From thence I went immediately to Corners in Broad Mead to pay half three pence I owed. I saw Mr Corner there. I believe these two fellows Miller and Evans came in thereafter. They had some ale there. I had none with them nor they had none with me. I stop’t there three quarters of an hour. I dont know how long they stayed. I believe I went away before them. Dont know the time of the day I left Corners.

I went with an intention to go home. I called at the Montague and had a can of ale. I enquired for Mr Cousins. I wanted to ask him how he was, as he had hurt his back. I did not enquire for anybody else. From thence I went to the Blackmoors Head at the foot of the down. Miller and Evans were there in the kitchen before I came. I only saw them as I went into another room. I stopped at the Blackmoors Head till twelve o’clock, then went to bed. I did not speak either to Miller or Evans at the Blackmoors Head. On the morrow I went to Clifton to Mr Stones to see my daughter and then went home. I went into town the day before to speak with my nephew. I had no other business that day in town, wanted to ask him for some things he had promised me. I never saw Miller afterwards until last night when he was in custody. I saw Evans yesterday running over the down as I was coming. When my brother Thomas Pearce my nephew's father was bad I went to see him and continued with him thirteen nights. He was talking about his Effects, he said he left me nothing upon his will but that I was to have it all after his sons death. I heard flying reports lately that my nephew was going to sell the King David. I never talked with Miller about my nephew. I thought he was a man not to be talked with about such a business as that. I believe I did one day last week ask Daniel Evans when he saw his brother Thomas Evans. He said he did not know when he saw him. I had no answer and no reason for enquiring for his brother. My reason for coming to town then was to see my nephew as I had no work. I have six children and work as a carpenter for what I have.

The Information of James Bevan in the Horsefair of the City of Bristol Innholder.

Who on his oath saith that on the fifth day of September now last past he lost out of a chest of drawers in his bedchamber at the Whitehorse Inn in the Horsefair in the City of Bristol two Bank of England notes value twenty pounds each, one Bristol Bank note value ten pounds, one draft or bill of Exchange drawn by Isaac Riddle & Co on Dean Whitehead & Co for eight pounds and in moneys hundred twenty one pounds. Saith that the person now in custody giving her name Lettice Saunders but who this information believes is the wife of William Evans labourer was the servant to this informant and had access to the room in which such drawers were placed, that no other person but this informant and his wife were accustomed to go into such room, and that the drawer in which such cash and notes were was locked. That suspects said Lettice Saunders otherwise Evans. He caused her to be taken into custody and upon searching her found a key which would unlock the lock of such drawers in which said cash and notes were hid, that said Saunders otherwise Evans had no box, trunk, or other package with a lock to which said key belonged as said Evans acknowledged to this informant. That on further searching her he found on her a bottle of mountain wine of the value of two shillings which she confessed she had taken from this informant, and one pair of thread stockings value one shilling and one pair of worsted stockings value of one shilling which this informant saith are his property. From all which circumstances this informant apprehends and believes that said Lettice Saunders otherwise Evans feloniously stole the notes and monys above mentioned.

City of Bristol and County of the same City (to wit) The voluntary confession of Robert Edwards Mariner taken the eighth day of June 1792 before Thomas Harris Esq'c being one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the City of Bristol and County of the same City.

Who saith that about Saturday lat the second of this instant June he arrived in this City from Dublin on board the Brigg Flora, whereof Thomas Hodgson is Master, and that being lame the said Thomas Hodgson gave this Examinant his passage on board the said vessel — And saith that on Sunday night last being the third day of this instant June he went on board the said Vessel, there lying at the Quay in the parish of St Stephen within this City and County, to sleep and that after he had assisted the people on board in getting out some horses that were in the vessel, he went below and lay upon some sails there but did not undress himself, that between the hours of ten and eleven at night he this Examinant with the aid of an iron bolt which he found in the said vessel broke open the bulk-head by forcing the same and entered the hold of the said vessel where he found a box that was broken open at one end and from which he took a quantity of linen which he immediately carried upon the deck of the said vessel where he stayed the remainder of the night and until about six o'clock the next morning when he carried the same on shore and went immediately to Pill in the county of Somerset where he delivered all the linen which he had so taken, except two pieces, to one Hester Avory, the wife of Joseph Avory labourer, to sell for him; that the said Hester Avory, immediately went out to sell some of the said linen and returned in about ten minutes to this examinant with some money, but how much she gave to this examinant on her first return he cannot now remember or set forth, but that in the course of that day the said Hester Avory sold all the said linen except the said two pieces before mentioned, and gave this examinant, in the whole, one guinea and a half in gold and some silver but how much in silver this examinant cannot now recollect. That he then gave to the said Hester Avory one of the said pieces of linen which he had so reserved, for her own use, and the other piece he left with her the said Hester Avory to keep for himself. And this examinant further saith that he hath looked at three pieces of linen now produced which he knows to be part of the linen he stole as aforesaid out of the said vessel, for that he cut the same in the manner it now appears.

APPENDIX C:

Documents from the Public Record Office, relating to transportation.

The P.R.O. has a number of documents concerning the transportation of convicts to New South Wales for the last years of the century (H.O. 10/1, HO 10/6, HO 10/2, HO11/1).

(1) HO 10/1 contains a "List of Male Convicts Embarked for N.S.W." It is a register giving the names of the convicts, the date of arrival, the name of the ship which carried them, the ship master's name, the date of conviction, the length of the term to serve, the way they were disposed of, and whether they were still resident in the colony when the document was written (obviously post 1815, since some people were reported as "dead 1815"). The information is spread across a double page. Here I have noted only those convicted at Bristol sessions. The list of names was drawn up in alphabetical order, irrespective of dates. Here only those who were sentenced before 1800 are given.

Bryan Noah, arrived July 1799 on the Royal Admiral, Master Wilson, Convicted at Bristol Feb. 1798, sentenced to 14 years, emancipated 1812, still in the colony.

Jackson Hannah, Jan 1788, Charlotte, M. Gilbert, conv. 1785, 7 years, dead.
Williams Mary, July 1798, Britannia, M. Donnet, conv. May 1795, 14 years, married, in the colony.

(4) HO 11/1 – List of Convicts.

This register is an important document, for it contains: in the front pages, an index of the name of each ship, (generally) its date of sailing and the page on which relevant information can be found. This is followed by chronological lists of the names of those to be transported, where they were convicted, when convicted, and the terms to which they were sentenced. The back pages contain tables giving information about the numbers of male and female prisoners to be transported, the different terms, dates of embarkation and the totals; the names of the ships, the dates of sailing and the numbers of prisoners on each. Data begin with the year 1787, and lists are drawn monthly. Each list is headed by the following explanation: “A List of Persons transported as Criminals to New South Wales in the Ships following viz. ... in the Month of ...” These lists are in alphabetical order of the places where the prisoners were convicted. Bristol sometimes comes under its own name, sometimes under Somerset, at the beginning. I have retained here only the convicts’ names, the names of ships, where and when convicted, and the length of the term to be served.]

INDEX OF NAMES AND PLACES

When names occur more than once, it is often impossible to say whether the reference is to one or more persons with the same name. Thus, John Parry who was sentenced to be whipped in 1781 may or may not be the same person as John Parry who was transported to New South Wales in 1785. It cannot therefore be assumed that all entries given under a particular name in the Index refer to the same person.

All place names in and around Bristol are indexed under the general heading of Bristol.
