Farewell to Andrew Blythe — 15 years in the University Teaching Team

This month I started a new job in the medical school — Director of Assessments and Feedback. It's a job I have done before but this time around I want to give it more time which means I had to step down as Head of Teaching for primary care. It has been a privilege to lead the teaching team for the last 5 years. Both here, in the central team, and with the 200 or more GP practices across the South West who take our students, we have a brilliant team of teachers. Awarding the annual prizes to our GP teachers and seeing our students become doctors, was the highlight of the academic year for me.

I will continue to work at Gaywood House Surgery in Bedminster, Bristol, for 2 days a week and will still do some teaching. The rest of my time I will ensure that our examination system operates smoothly. With national exams, GMC visits and a new curriculum on the horizon I will have plenty to keep me busy.

Trevor Thompson, GP and Reader in Healthcare Education, and the recent recipient of a prestigious national teaching fellowship, has taken over as Head of Teaching for primary care. I am confident that GP teaching will continue to thrive under his leadership.

Thank you for all the support that you have given me and my colleagues over the years. Thanks too, to Mel, Alison, Jenny, Kirsten and Becky for their unstinting hard work in the teaching office. I shall miss them.

The Bristol Promise

I undertake that, as a graduate in Medicine of the University of Bristol, I will practise my profession to the best of my knowledge and ability with conscience and integrity. I will respect the secrets which are confided in me and maintain the utmost respect for human life. I will hold in the deepest respect the honourable traditions and obligations of the medical profession; even under threat, I will not use my medical knowledge contrary to the laws of humanity. Recognising what I have learnt from my teachers, I will myself pass on the art and science of medicine to others. I will work for the good of all persons whose health may be placed in my care and for the public wellbeing.

August beach read for your holidays from Trevor Thompson

I would recommend "Unbroken" by Laura Hillenbrand

In 1943 a bomber crashes into the Pacific Ocean. Against all odds, one young lieutenant survives. Louis Zamperini had already transformed himself from child delinquent to prodigious athlete, running in the Berlin Olympics. Now he must embark on one of the Second World War's most extraordinary odysseys. Zamperini faces thousands of miles of open ocean on a failing raft. Beyond lie only greater trials, in Japan's prisoner-of-war camps. It is a great study in resilience.
